Spain After Franco Is Torn by Disorder He Fought

By HENRY GINGER

MADRID, March 3 — Three months after the death of Francisco Franco, who prided himself on 40 years of peace and order, Spain is a disputatious country that is full of grievances and has quickly shed its inhibitions about expressing them.

The Franco regime used to be accused of distracting people's attention from their real problems with soccer matches. Now even that apolitical fortress has been breached. The soccer players are asking for a union and want a 44-hour week. Teachers, musicians, bricklayers, actors, factory workers, students, journalists, public employees, including even policemen, housewives, doctors, soldiers, truckers—they are part of a long list of Spaniards who have struck, demonstrated, protested or otherwise manifested nonconformity with things as they are.

Military Reaction Feared There is worry that at some point or other highly conservative military chiefs who think what is happening is abnormal might seek to re-establish through military dictatorship the standards in force for 40 years.

There are groups that "continue to consider as normal everything that happened in former times and not only normal for its time but normal for now, and what is more, normal for the future," the magazine Triunfo remarked last week. "It is impossible to ignore the importance of this position and its possibilities for influencing the present moment. Those who represent it have considerable strength."

In the National Defense Committee of Parliament, a number of rightist deputies recently complained bitterly of universities that have become transformed into "Marxist fortresses," as one put it. Adm. Pedro Nieto Antón, a former Navy Minister, called for immediate action and added, "If higher decisions are not taken, we shall act on our own." Coming from a military man, the words were not lost.

The highly conservative

Typical of the current unrest in Spain was this confrontation in Barcelona last month, when police fired tear gas at a crowd demanding autonomy for Catalonians; in the clash that followed, many were injured.

Deputy Prime Minister for Defense Affairs, Lieut. Gen. Fernando de Santiago, said two weeks ago that the armed forces should stay out of political struggle but had the task of defending such values as religion, the family and the fatherland. General de Santiago said these values were under attack from subversive groups and made it clear the armed forces would not stand idly by.

Behind the Caution The military attitude, the memory of the disorders of the Second Republic and the subsequent disintegration of the country into civil war help to explain the cautious, constantly hedged and often backward-looking language of those who now hold political power. The problem is that the attempt to carry out a prudently phased program of reform is running up against the natural impatience of large sectors of the population, a depressed economy and a lack of credibility.

In the three months of the new monarchy almost nothing has changed juridically and many things have changed in fact. Some of the harsher elements of a so-called antiterrorist law decreed last August have been eliminated and a bill loosening controls on the right of assembly has been sent to Parliament. The rest is a matter of promise and study.

A mixed commission of government ministers and members of the National Movement, Franco's vehicle for political control, is studying constitutional reform, notably to provide for a bicameral legislature, which would include an assembly elected by universal suffrage.

The Ministry of Justice is studying changes in the penal code that restrict political activity. A new law widening the possibility of political association is under consideration. Commissions are studying special administrations for the Basque country and for Catalonia, although every other region is also clamoring for special recognition.

The Ministry of Syndicate Relations is studying the transformation of the state-controlled unions into separate and independent organizations for labor and management.

Political Groups Active But pushed by their own impatience and benefiting from a fair degree of tolerance, political groups all across the spectrum have been meeting, organizing and campaigning as if the elections were tomorrow.

Political families, notably the Socialists and Christian Democrats, that for years were split into rival factions are trying to unify because that way lies electoral salvation. Rightists no longer want to be called rightists and people once associated with the authoritarian policies of Franco are now preaching democracy.

The latest to hire a hall was a group known as Democratic Reform, whose leader is the Minister of the Interior, Manuel Fraga Iribarne. When he entered a hotel reception room the other night, people shouted "Fraga, Fraga, Fraga" as easily as they used to shout "Franco, Franco, Franco."

Two Are Killed in Basque City As Police Battle Demonstrators

Special to The New York Times

MADRID, March 3—Two persons were killed and 15 wounded today in the Basque City of Vitoria when the police opened fire on demonstrators.

Thousands of striking workers had surged through the city of 125,000 people in an effort to force a shutdown of economic activity. The police asserted they had been surrounded and had fired in self-defense.

The fighting in Vitoria was part of a scene of national unrest that was also marked by clashes between students and the police in Madrid, by a strike of professors and by a slowdown by bakery workers that caused bread shortages.

Some 2,000 students and teachers gathered in the law department at the University of Madrid partly to protest the events of yesterday at the University of La Laguna in Tenerife in the Canary Islands. The University had invited a well-known Catalan leftist singer, Lluís Llach, to perform, but the police forbade it. The rector, Enrique Fernández Valde, then resigned along with the university's governing board.

"We are tired of having outside organizations interfering in university affairs," said Mr. Fernández, whose resignation was not accepted by the Ministry of Education.

This apparently was also the mood in Madrid where the police, after being removed from the campus for a while, have begun to move in again to tear down dissident posters and break up meetings.

After meeting on the campus several hundred students tried to march on the Ministry of Education in midtown Madrid but met head-on with both riot policemen and groups of extreme rightists. Several students were reported injured. Carlos Pérez Bricio, on the

Meanwhile, professors who work on contract and have no tenure — the great majority of those teaching in Spanish universities — began a two-day walkout for salary increases, for the readmission of students and teachers expelled from the universities in the past, and for a new statute for the teaching corps.

Truckers who had tied up most of the country's road transport for more than a week and had cut food deliveries began to return to work today after threats of legal action. But consumers were faced with a new problem. Bakery employees pushing for higher wages went to work at 4 A.M. instead of 11 last night and the result was late deliveries of bread or no deliveries at all to stores.

The economic gloom was augmented by a report yesterday by the Minister of Industry, Carlos Pérez Bricio, on the country's performance last year.

"It was a bad year," he said, pointing to an overall increase in the gross national product, the sum of all goods and services produced, of only 0.7 percent. Investment dropped by 9.2 percent and industrial unemployment rose to 5 percent.

Criticism at the Soviet Party Congress Is Limited to the Economy

By DAVID K. SHIPLER
Special to The New York Times
MOSCOW, March 3—In the Soviet Union, there are certain subjects on which the Government may be criticized publicly, certain forms the criticism may take and certain people who may do the criticizing. The strict norms of political behavior that control and channel criticism have been on display for nine days as the 25th party congress, meeting in the Kremlin, has heard speaker after speaker address the successes and problems of the country.

The pattern of praise and complaint show that Moscow's foreign policy is immune to public attack that neither the United States nor ideological war with China may be questioned. The Kremlin's attitude toward "wars of liberation," Western Communist parties, military deployment and all other external issues are not permissible fields of debate.

Criticism of the government's stand on dissidents and emigration is taboo. No disagreement may be expressed with the amount of money allocated to the armed forces.

Some Criticism Is Sharp
Practically the only area open to strong complaints has been the performance of the country's economy, and even there the criticism—while unusually sharp—has been limited to inefficiency and poor management. The basic economic principles of the government have been off limits to attack, and no fundamental structural reforms have been proposed. Furthermore, the targets of the complaints are normally restricted to middle-level or low-level officials and bureaucrats. In this Congress, the Minister of Agriculture, Dmitri S. Polyanskiy, has been criticized along with his ministry, mainly because of the bad harvest last year, the worst in a decade.

Yesterday, Prime Minister Aleksandr P. Lyshko of the Agriculture Ministry's scientific institutes had failed to provide high-yield seeds for sugarbeets.

This example reflects significant shortcomings in the work of the Ministry of Agriculture of the U.S.S.R., he declared. "I share criticisms voiced by the delegates of the congress addressed to the ministry. Its work needs drastic improvement."

Discretion Being Used
The ethics of such attacks seem to call for a certain discretion. Names are almost never used, for example. Furthermore, nobody higher than a minister is criticized; the party chief, Leonid I. Brezhnev, and other top members of the Politburo are left untouched.

Lenin once wrote of the desirability of "full freedom of criticism at all levels, provided the unity needed to achieve a certain aim is not thereby disrupted." He defined party discipline as "unity of action, freedom of discussion and criticism that undermines or impedes unity in a course of action decided on by the party is inadmissible."

chastised all sectors of industry for failing in the consumer-goods field.

Both Mr. Brezhnev and Mr. Kosygin, however, observed the unwritten rule that criticism must be sweetened, perhaps oversteered, with praise. Mr. Kosygin ended his address with a sentence guaranteed to get him a standing ovation: "The work that is being accomplished by our congress is deep confidence that the 10th five-year plan period will see new historic achievements by the heroic working class, the splendid collective-farm peasantry, the people's intellectuals and the youth of our country." He then announced the results of the congress, which is scheduled to adjourn Friday, when the 10th five-year plan period will see new historic achievements by the heroic working class, the splendid collective-farm peasantry, the people's intel-

Thai Elections a Month Off, the Violence Mounts

A. ANDELMAN
BANGKOK, March 3—Just a month before Thai national elections, a year and a half of marked violence and extremism from left to right have become necessary when the coalition government of Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj dissolved Parliament and called for the new election. In fact, it was understood that military leaders here put pressure on Mr. Kukrit to make these moves, believing that Mr. Kukrit would lose a confidence vote in Parliament, paving the way for a new coalition that would include some Socialist Party elements.

The candidates in the current campaign range across the political spectrum — from the left-wing Socialist Party through the moderate and reformist New Force Party, from the Social Action Party of Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj and the Democratic Party of his elder brother, Seni Pramoj, to uprisings and of the right-wing military-oriented Social Justice Party and new far-rightist-nationalist movement known as Navapol.

Fifty-six political parties have registered for the April 4 election, nearly a dozen more than last year, although only 40 are expected to offer candidates. About 2,400 candidates are expected to vie for the 279 seats in the House of Representatives.

A prominent policeman, Major Anant Senakant, who is running for Parliament in Chon Buri south of Bangkok. The mob kicked, punched and threatened to lynch him after he said that "hooligans rule the city."

None of these incidents has particularly astonished a nation where a professional killing can be arranged for $250 and an amateur assassination can be purchased for as little as $20. But the disorder has brought warnings from the military which ruled this country until two years ago.

Two days before the bombing of the New Force Party headquarters, for instance, Gen. Sangad Chaloray, commander of the armed forces, warned that a demolition squad of 120 Communist saboteurs, including 37 women masquerading as masseuses, had infiltrated Bangkok and were preparing "urban guerrilla terrorism."

Wants Spain Ties Parallel Those With NATO Nations

By DAVID BINDER
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, March 3—A State Department spokesman today said the Administration's position on Spain on military aid was designed to be comparable to that of other NATO nations.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Robert J. McCloskey, said the treaty's terms to ease Spanish relations with the United States are in line with those of NATO nations.

McCloskey testified that the Spanish Government's use of political prisoners is a "major concern" of the United States.

In Patna, Once Center of Indian Opposition, Authoritarian Quiet Prevails

By WILLIAM BORDERS
Special to The New York Times

PATNA, India, Feb. 27—Brilliant red bougainvillea vines still arch across the terrace where Jaya Prakash Narayan loved to stroll, but his office is padlocked now, and inside it the mementos of a lifetime of opposition are gathering dust.

Mr. Narayan, whose call for a "total revolution" against the Government of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi touched off the crisis that led to the sweeping suspension of civil liberties in India, is in Bombay now, out of jail, but gravely ill.

His political movement, which had its center in this wretchedly poor and backward city 300 miles northwest of Calcutta, has been badly bruised, if not crushed, by the stern Government crackdown.

"No one comes around here much anymore, except for the police," who have staged a couple of raids, said R. K. Saran, Mr. Narayan's 21-year-old great nephew, who now takes care of the faded yellow stucco building where the movement's strikes and protest marches used to be planned.

Patna, which a year ago was gripped by constant political turmoil and agitation, is calm and peaceful now, and the posters praising Mr. Narayan as "leader of the people" have been replaced by posters declaring that Prime Minister Gandhi has "saved the republic" with the authoritarian course she set it on last June.

Narayan Held and Freed
The change in Patna reflects a change that has come to many parts of India with the imposition of order from above, and a key to it, here as elsewhere, has been the wholesale arrests of the Government's opponents, including most of Mr. Narayan's more prominent disciples.

Mr. Narayan — who is widely known as J. P. — was arrested, too, in the first sweep last summer, after Mrs. Gandhi declared that his campaign against her Government created a national emergency. But four and a half months later, as his health deteriorated seriously, he was released.

Many people here think that the only reason the Government released Mr. Narayan, a frail 73-year-old ascetic with severe kidney trouble and several other ailments, was to avoid the political repercussions of having him die in jail.

"Now if J. P. dies, they've taken away our power to make a martyr of him," said a bitter student at Patna University, which used to be a center of discontent, but is now tranquil.

Almost none of the other jailed opposition leaders have been released, and although the Government has never disclosed the number of political prisoners, independent estimates in New Delhi and elsewhere range upward from 40,000.

"We have selected not to make public the number of arrests, because the press distorts it and draws false conclusions," said R. N. Dash, the home secretary of Bihar State, of which Patna is the capital. "But anyone can see that with all the violent agitations stopped, and the new sense of discipline, things are much better in Bihar."

Ironically, the principal goals of the movement led by Mr. Narayan — land reform, lower prices, and an end to corruption — have now become the principal stated goals of the Government that silenced him.

"Day by day, in every way, Bihar is getting better and better," a recent newspaper advertisement declared, giving details of a land-redistribution program and what the Government said would be a redoubled effort to enforce the agricultural minimum wage, which is 60 cents a day, plus meals.

But the people in Patna who still support Mr. Narayan, though they can no longer march in the streets behind him, say that the Government reforms are all rhetoric and that without radical changes most of the residents of this region are doomed to remain achingly poor.

When Mr. Narayan opened his drive to bring down the Government in early 1974, he said: "We need to change completely the old way of doing things."

In a campaign that the Prime Minister now frequently cites as justification for what she has done, Mr. Narayan then called upon his followers to barricade the State Assembly building here and he spoke as well of blockading the homes of the Assembly members to prevent them from taking part in a Government that he regarded as hopelessly corrupt.

"We won't let them go," he said at one rally. "We'll make it impossible for the Assembly to function."

He frequently compared his program of anti-Government agitation to the independence struggle against the British, in which both he and Mrs. Gandhi were active partici-

SIMON GIVES ISRAEL VOW ON TRADE AID

Special to The New York Times

TEL AVIV, March 2 — Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon pledged today that the United States would help Israeli businessmen find American investors and customers.

The pledge came in a statement signed by Mr. Simon and the Israeli Finance Minister, Yehoshua Rabinowitz, as co-chairmen of the United States-Israel Joint Committee for Investment and Trade.

[Mr. Rabinowitz said later, The Associated Press reported, that one result of the talks was an agreement for Israeli arms manufacturers to sell "some spare parts" to the American military.]

Also signed today at a ceremony in the Parliament building was an agreement to establish a joint industrial research and development foundation, to be endowed by both governments with initial contributions of $31 million each.

Mrs. Peron Seeking Backing Of Labor for Economic Plan

Special to The New York Times

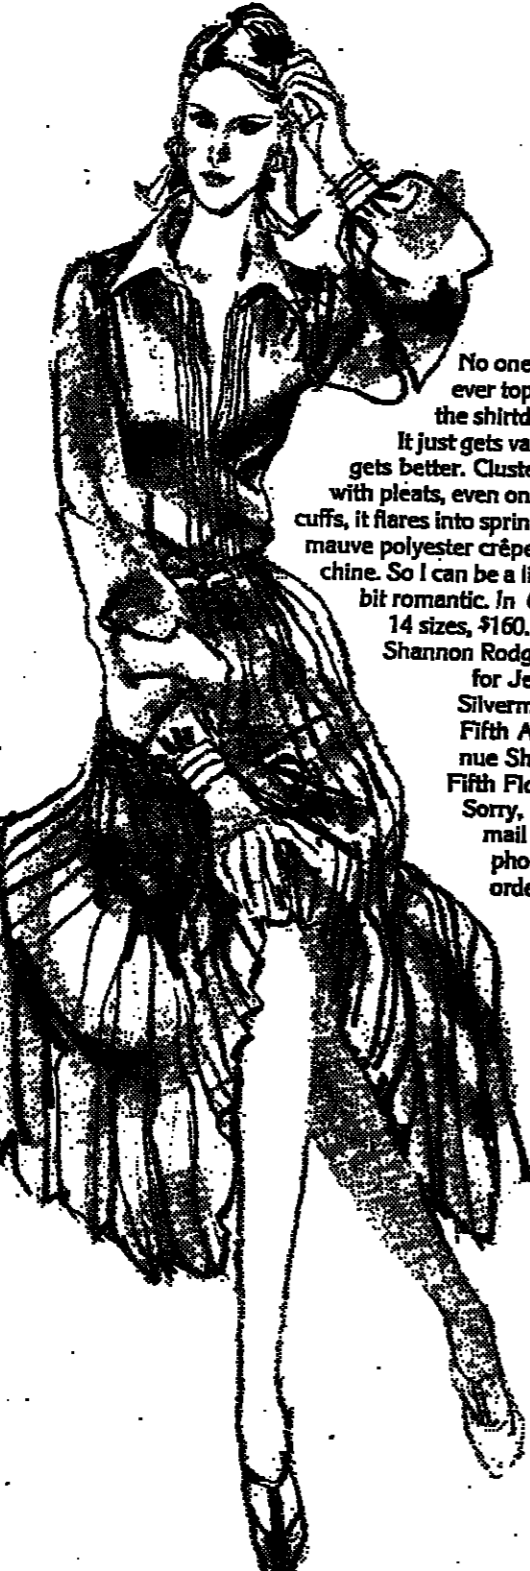

BUENOS AIRES, March 3—A new plan to "salvage" Argentina's economy from inflation and debt was presented to approval today by Minister of Economy Emilio Mondelli to the top Peronist labor leaders.

The meeting of Mr. Mondelli and the union leaders, led by Lorenzo Miguel, head of the Metalworkers Union, was held in the presence of President Isabel Martinez de Peron, who is struggling to retain the political support of labor.

After the meeting, which lasted six hours, Mr. Mondelli said he could not answer in the affirmative when he was asked if the plan had been approved.

"But my impression is not negative," he added, saying that the meeting would continue tomorrow.

The plan reportedly calls for a wage increase for all workers of 2,000 pesos, or about 20 percent, effective March 1, but the labor leaders pointed out that prices in January and February rose nearly 40 percent.

U.S. MOVES TO END EGYPT ARMS CURB

confirmed this afternoon that "consultations" had begun this week with Congress on opening a military supply relationship with Egypt in answer to repeated appeals from President Anwar el-Sadat for help in ending his country's dependence on the Soviet Union.

Meanwhile, the Democratic Senate leader, Mike Mansfield, said he wanted an investigation into Mr. Sadat's statement on Sunday that he had reached "secret agreements" with the United States last fall to prevent an Israeli attack on Syria and to support Palestinian participation in a Middle East settlement.

The State Department insisted again that all "relevant" agreements had been already conveyed to Congress last fall, and officials refused to say whether those agreements cited by Mr. Sadat fell in that category.

The Israeli Embassy was informed on Monday, officials said, of the Administration's decision to seek the concurrence of Congress in the first of what might be a long-term sales relationship with Egypt. Mr. Sadat has said publicly and privately for some time that he wanted to buy defensive and other military equipment from the United States. As a result of strained relations with Moscow, he has repeatedly asserted, he has been unable to supply his armed forces adequately.

Consultations Planned

Usually, when the United States decides to sell a line of military equipment to a foreign government, Congress is notified after the actual formal decision has been made. But because of the anticipated concern by Israel and its supporters, the Administration says it is undertaking an extra step—one of "consulting" in advance of taking a formal move.

Officials insisted that although the Administration strongly desired to begin military sales to Egypt, the actual final decision had not yet been made, pending completion of the "consultations."

So far, about 35 members of Congress have been reached by Robert J. McCloskey, head of Congressional Relations at the State Department, Joseph J. Sisco, Under Secretary of State for Political Affairs, and other officials doing the briefing on Capitol Hill.

The argument being used by the Administration in favor of sales is that Mr. Sadat has shown a desire to end his dependence on the Soviet Union in military and other fields, a State Department official said.

"It is clearly in our interest to assist him in defending his policies of moderation against outside pressures," Robert L. Fumesh, the department spokesman, said when asked about the consultation.

Another official said, "It is vitally important to the United States to maintain the confidence of Egypt in the peace process in the Middle East."

Pressure on Sadat

Several Representatives who were briefed on the Administration's desire to lift the embargo, said that they had been told that Mr. Sadat was under considerable pressure from his military to show something concrete for his decision to orient his country's policies away from Moscow and toward the West.

This argument, however, ran into expected skepticism from pro-Israeli supporters such as Representative Benjamin S. Rosenthal, Democrat of Queens, and Representative Stephen J. Solarz, Democrat of Brooklyn, both on the House International Relations Committee.

Mr. Rosenthal said that he intended to introduce a resolution to block the C-130 sale once the Administration formally completed the necessary paperwork. Mr. Solarz, ridiculing the notion that Mr. Sadat had political troubles, said he believed "Mr. Ford will have more trouble getting re-elected than Mr. Sadat."

Senator Jacob K. Javits, Republican of New York, told the Administration, according to a staff aide, that he was reserving judgment on the sale.

Before the sale of the C-130's can go through, Mr. Ford will have to sign a letter of determination that Egypt is eligible to buy military equipment under the Foreign Military Sales Act.

Once this is done, a letter of notification of a proposed sale must be sent to Congress if it is for more than $25 million, and Congress has 20 days to block the transaction. Otherwise, the sale can go through.

The C-130, a turboprop developed by Lockheed and known as the Hercules, has been a major workhorse in the Air Force for years. It can take heavy loads and land and take off on rough terrain. It was widely used during the Vietnam War.

Israel has 16 C-130's. Administration officials said that Mr. Sadat had asked for a variety of systems, including anti-aircraft missiles and guns, anti-tank missiles, and F-5E jet fighters. But so far, no decisions have been made on the other items.

The United States has sold Egypt virtually no military equipment since 1955 when Cairo turned to the Soviet bloc, first to Czechoslovakia, and then to Moscow, for its arms.

John's rainy day pantsuit with tucks and shirttails. It makes me love a barometer-falling forecast. What's nicer than rain when you're dressed for it? How much nicer to be able to be casual, to take it in stride.

Lucky in the rain, that's me. John Anthony shirtdress-soft coat narrowed over the shoulders by a sunburst of tucks, tied at the waist, curved for prettiness over the hips by more tucks. Both, in sand polyester and cotton, 4 to 14 sizes, $220. Rainboutique, Third Floor.

These are so right, I can't wait to meet John Anthony, and watch the informal modeling tomorrow from 12 to 4.

John sees what goes in the rain as a year-round thing, nothing to do with seasons. So his collection includes rainsuits, long reefers, slickers, wrap and double-breasted coats with tucks and close waists, in shades of beige and rust, the natural colors that look right all year. Two Nations at a Glance

Mozambique ordered border with Rhodesia closed after what it described as Rhodesian attack on Faturu.

Mozambique
POPULATION—Mozambique's nine million people are mostly black, with those in the south heavily influenced by Portuguese culture and language. There are Roman Catholic, Islamic and Protestant converts among them. Europeans, Asians and those of mixed ancestry represent about 2 percent of the population, but emigration since Mozambique attained independence makes the figure uncertain.
GEOGRAPHY—Mozambique lies along the southeast coast of Africa, facing the Indian Ocean. It is north of South Africa, south of Tanzania and on the west borders on Rhodesia, Zambia and Malawi. The coastal lowlands, which comprise 44 percent of the country, rise in slope to mountains along the western border. It occupies 304,000 square miles, somewhat more than Texas.
ECONOMY—Agriculture dominates the economy, comprising 90 percent of the population and supplying 80 percent of the country's exports. Fishing is also important, coal is mined and copper, iron, bauxite, gold and tantalum have been found. Agricultural products, in the order of importance, are sugar, cashew nuts, copra, cotton, tea and sisal.
LEADERS—The new government that took over Sept. 20, 1974, was led by President Samora Machel. He is a bearded, intense, 41-year-old former nurse. Mr. Machel headed the Front for the Liberation of Mozambique, known in Africa as Frelimo, under which Mozambique attained full independence last June 25 as the People's Republic of Mozambique.
MILITARY—At the time of Mozambique's independence last year, its troop strength was estimated at about 10,000. The country has virtually no air force or navy.
HISTORY—Mozambique was discovered by Vasco da Gama in 1498 and colonized by the Portuguese until its independence in June 1975 after a 10-year war against Portuguese colonial rule.

Rhodesia
POPULATION—About 95 percent of Rhodesia's 6.4 million people are black Africans, mostly Bantu speaking. About 4.4 percent is white and half a percent is Asian or of mixed blood.
GEOGRAPHY—Rhodesia is mostly high plateau country, completely surrounded by land. Its only access to the sea is through Mozambique, its neighbor on the east, or South Africa, its southern neighbor. On the northwest, it is bordered by Zambia, on the southwest by Botswana. It is 151,000 square miles in area, and its capital is Salisbury.
ECONOMY—Agriculture and mining are the mainstays of the economy, with tobacco being the most important agricultural product and the leading export before economic sanctions were instituted against the country in 1968 by the United Nations. The country also produces gold and asbestos and is one of the major producers of chrome.
LEADERS—Jan D. Smith, who became Prime Minister of Rhodesia in 1964, led the country in declaring its independence from Britain in 1965 to avoid steps toward black majority rule. In the late 1960's he was termed Iron Man Ian by some of his supporters. Mr. Smith has held negotiations with the British in efforts to resolve London's desire for a Rhodesian Constitution that would eventually grant black majority rule, but so far they have failed.
MILITARY—Rhodesia has armed forces totaling 5,700, and a territorial reserve force of 10,000. The armed forces include 4,500 regular army and 1,200 air force personnel with 40 combat aircraft.
HISTORY—Rhodesia was originally Southern Rhodesia, part of a country privately colonized in the 1890's by Cecil Rhodes's British South Africa Company. The company's rule was ended by a referendum in favor of separate status as a largely self-governing colony of Britain in 1923. In 1965, Rhodesians declared their independence.

Britain Acclaims Mozambique For Sanction Against Rhodesia

LONDON, March 3—The British Government said today that it welcomed Mozambique's decision to apply full economic sanctions against the white minority Government of neighboring Rhodesia.
 Edward Rowlands, Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, told the House of Commons that the Mozambique developments emphasized the gravity of the situation for Rhodesia and made it "even more important" for Prime Minister Ian D. Smith to accept transition to black majority rule.
 He said the British Government supported proposals for international aid to Mozambique to offset economic losses involved in preventing the bulk of unlicensed Rhodesian's exports and imports from being moved across Mozambique territory and through its ports.
 The Government of Prime Minister Smith declared Rhodesia independent of Britain in November 1965 because of British demands for progress toward majority rule, and the British have continued to press over the years for giving political power to Rhodesian blacks.
 Referring in Commons today to the economic boycott called for by the United Nations Security Council in 1967, Mr. Rowlands said he welcomed the announcement by President Samora Machel "that his Government intends to apply forthwith full U.N. sanctions against Rhodesia."
 Britain has been among the countries imposing such sanctions, but complaints of violations have been filed over the years against more than 50 countries, among them the United States, which has continued to import nickel and chrome from Rhodesia.
 Many questions were raised in Commons today about the defense of Rhodesia, reflecting concern over the white population of the country.
 For instance, Jeremy Thorpe, the Liberal Party leader, asked if a legal Government in Rhodesia would be entitled to "the protection of the crown." Mr. Rowlands replied: "That is not the present situation."
 Winston Churchill, grandson of the wartime leader, asked: "If the Soviet Union sponsors 'if' of national liberation against Rhodesia whose side would the Government take, politically, morally and diplomatically?"
 Mr. Rowlands replied: "That is a purely hypothetical question but the position which all parties have supported for a long time is the peaceful transition to majority rule in Rhodesia."
 Yesterday, Foreign Secretary James Callaghan said in Commons that Britain would not intervene militarily in a war in Rhodesia. Defense Secretary Roy Mason said the same last Friday.
 "If bloodshed becomes inevitable," said Edward Taylor, a Conservative, "would you at least give Rhodesia a chance to defend herself by scrapping British sanctions, or providing her with arms comparable with those of the invading forces?"
 Mr. Rowlands replied that Mozambique had not spoken of war against Rhodesia. "That is a wrong interpretation of reports we have received," he added.
 The news from Mozambique brought turmoil to London's financial district as first reports were interpreted as indicating war was about to be declared.
 Generally, prices on the stock market closed above the lowest of the day but the market remained dull.
 Zambian Halls Decision
 LUSAKA, Zambia, March 3 (Reuters)—President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia tonight hailed the decision by Mozambique to close its border with Rhodesia, saying Zambia and Mozambique would work together for justice in Rhodesia.

Koos van den Akker. An impressionist with a touch of the Dutch master.

To know a Koos design, you must know Koos himself. That rich custom look comes from years of working his own small custom shop. That élan was no doubt acquired during apprentice years in Paris. That soft, sensuous feeling is a giveaway that, for a time, he designed lingerie. And the purity and inbred quality reflects his earnest Dutch upbringing. It's a marvelous, inventive, eclectic style. One that really suits him, and you. Shown jacketed and alone, late-day dressing with a delightful surprise...a cardigan ablaze with fabric appliques in back. Even that staple of city life, the tee and wrap skirt, is very new with ribbon and patchwork insets on flowers and a raft of tee's to mix in free association. Shown, priced. from 65.00 to 260.00

Bishops Ask Catholics to Pray
On Behalf of the Jews in Syria

By KENNETH A. BRIGGS

The United States Catholic Bishops' Conference has for the first time asked parishes across the nation to offer prayers on behalf of Jews living in difficult circumstances.

Bishop James S. Rausch, general secretary of the conference, has forwarded a suggested prayer to bishops for use at masses on March 14.

Bishop Rausch was responding to an invitation from the Synagogue Council of America to join Jews during a special Sabbath of Concern, to be sponsored by the Synagogue Council, in concern for their Syrian brethren. The sabbath will begin March 12.

The Synagogue Council, representing Conservative, Reform and Orthodox Judaism nationwide, has also won the support of many Protestant groups and will convene several interfaith services to mark the special appeal.

The suggested Roman Catholic prayer, intended for use during the intercessory prayers of the mass, reads:

"Let us join with our fellow Christians, Jews and others across our nation today in commemorating a Sabbath of Concern for Jews in Syria."

After a period of silent prayer, it continues:

"That there may be an alleviation of the suffering experienced by Jews living in Syria and that they may be free to move and to emigrate as they desire, let us pray to the Lord."

A spokesman for the conference said that use of the special prayer would be optional. The spokesman added that the conference agreed to cooperate in the plea because the "Synagogue Council felt the situation of Syrian Jews is particularly difficult and we accepted their judgment."

Rabbi Joseph H. Lookstein, president of the Synagogue Council, expressed "profound gratitude for the action taken by the United States Catholic Bishops' Conference" in a letter to Bishop Rausch.

The plight of the Syrian Jews has been an acute concern on religious and humanitarian grounds. The 4,000 Jews in Syria are almost entirely confined to enclosed communities in Damascus, Aleppo and Kamishi. They have complained of restricted mobility, denial of employment and a lack of access to universities. They are also reported to be under constant surveillance.

In the past, the Catholic church has voiced concern for Jews in various parts of the world, including the Soviet Union, but this is the first time the appeal has involved prayers during mass.

The master storyteller's new best seller is a novel of outrage and compassion about the search for a secret that could literally tear apart the civilized world.

A train leaves Salonika, Greece, in December, 1939;
on board are two men with an ancient document which could pit religion against religion, and change the course of World War II more dramatically than a hundred armies.

The two men are soon dead, but the search goes on for the document they have managed to hide—beyond the war, across national boundaries, into the 1970s.

Ultimately, the race for its possession involves twin brothers—The Gemini—one of whom will stop at nothing for the kind of power the document will bring to the man who possesses it.

ITALIAN SOCIALIST BARS RED TIE NOW

Says Party Will Try to Work With Christian Democrats

By ALVIN SHUSTER Special to The New York Times ROME, March 4—Francesco De Martino, Italy's Socialist leader, said today that the present his party would not go into alliance with the Communists but would work instead for new relations with the dominant Christian Democrats.

speech suggested that he felt the time was not ripe and that the Socialists were better off linked to the Christian Democrats. There is increasing speculation here that after the next election, scheduled for next year, the Socialists and the Communists will try to form a new government. The prospect has been of particular concern to Washington, and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has told European Socialists of his opposition to such coalitions.

Mr. De Martino noted that there were obvious obstacles to a Socialist-Communist government. For one, he said, the Communists have said they oppose the idea because they favor the so-called Historical Compromise—a share of power with the Christian Democrats, Socialists and other non-Communist parties.

and insisting on independence for his party, took a stand that was "Frank and open, decisive and without half-measures." At present, in the 630-seat Chamber of Deputies, the Communists have 61 seats and the Christian Democrats have 279. Together they are 76 seats short of a majority. But the Communists, who are now about 2 percent of the population, could emerge from the next elections as Italy's largest party.

that President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing's Government agreed to American foreign interference politics. Mr. Marchais was on a counter when Gaston Deffieux, leader of the United States delegation here had to fight against the French Communist Party. "The similar moves by American and other French break up the election between French and Socialist"—Mr. Marchais said in a conference. "Frank and open, decisive and without half-measures."

Effort to Draft New Constitution For Ulster Power-Sharing Ends

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, March 3—Efforts to draft a new constitution for Northern Ireland to allow participation in government by the Roman Catholic minority ended in apparent failure tonight, and it appeared that direct rule from London would continue for some time.

The 10-month-old Northern Ireland Convention is to be disbanded, and it was understood that the British Government would initiate another attempt in 18 months or two years in the hope that a period of political stagnation might produce a compromise between the majority Protestants and the Catholics.

The convention adjourned in disagreement over how to work out a political solution and end the strife that has killed more than 1,400 people in the last six years.

Speaking at the final session, Ernest Baird, a leading Protestant politician, warned the British Government that another refusal of Protestant demands would lead to further "bloodshed, conflict and refugees."

Mr. Baird, who heads the United Ulster Unionist Council, said that he supported renewed paramilitary activity by Protestants to seek out and defeat the Irish Republican Army, which wants to join Northern Ireland to the Irish Republic.

But he said that he was against Mafia-like activities or sectarian murder.

Mr. Baird's speech provoked an angry reaction from the mainly Catholic Social Democratic and Labor Party. Speaking for it, Patrick O'Donoghue said that Mr. Baird's support for paramilitary organizations was "one of the most disgraceful statements I have ever heard in this house."

William Craig, a former leader of the Baird group, called for a referendum on voluntary Protestant-Catholic coalition government, the issue that lost him his place in the Protestant leadership. But although Mr. Craig had support from moderate parties, the Catholic group abstained, saying it thought the price that might be paid in blood and division would be too high.

Merlyn Rees, the British Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, predicted yesterday that direct rule from London would continue for some time. It appeared that the British Government had decided to reject the convention report, which recommends a return to majority government.

The Protestant coalition that dominated the convention had recommended last year against any power-sharing with the Social Democratic and Labor Party, but the recommendation was opposed by the British Parliament.

As a result, Mr. Rees recalled the convention to try to work out a new plan.

Bomb Factory Found

LONDON, March 3 (Reuters)—The police have found a bomb factory in southern London that they believe may have supplied explosives for recent Irish Republican Army attacks here.

Scotland Yard detectives found 40 pounds of explosives as well as detonators and timing devices in a large house last night. The explosives were the same type used in eight bombings in London since an I.R.A. member, Francis Stagg, died in prison last month after a hunger strike.

Agency Assailed by Ford Defers New Safety Rules Till After Election

DAVID BURNHAM
 At the New York Times
 NGTON, March 3—A agency that has been l by President Ford for so tough on business poned until after the election the adoption up of new safety regulations that could affect the millions of employees of the new standards of new standards
 industrial exposure levels such as cancer-causing asbestos and beryllid for more general problems such as excessive was disclosed in a s prepared by the Occu-Safety and Health Adon Feb. 23. A copy
 schedule has been ob-
 The New York Times.
 fancies, a spokesman gency, said in response inquiry about the posts that "we are con-about dates, but no final has been made on ag." ent Ford, business and businessmen all country have made a favorite target
 spread criticism of all Federal regulations.
 speech early last month
 Hampshire, for ex-president Ford told his men audience that he would "like to throw into the ocean." He had instructed it to ding "with citizens as not enemies."
 not tolerate the un-and unjustified harof citizens," the Pres-ider said.
 including the Pres-Council of Economic have criticized the gency as being ineffectual.
 draft statement pre-arer this year, the staff charged that the ad had "an insubstancial effect on accident rates."

 It said that the agency's relatively small fines meant that an unsafe plant could remain that way through successive citations."
 A study last October by the Health Research Group, an organization established by Ralph Nader, found that more than 88 percent of the agency's citations involved what it called nonserious matters and resulted in an average fine of $19.18.
 The average fine for the small number of serious violations was $508.37.
 The Feb. 23 Occupational Safety and Health Administration schedule obtained by The Times shows that the adoption date now expected for such substances as ammonia, arsenic, asbestos, beryllium, cotton dust and lead is now months behind what was projected by the agency in September 1975.

 In virtually all of the cases, the postponement means that the standards scheduled for before the election in November will now be promulgated after it.
Delays Are Listed
 Promulgation of a new exposure standard for ammonia, for example, which the Government estimates is handled by 500,000 workers, was moved from June 1976 to February 1977. Asbestos, a cancer-causing material that is handled directly by 100,000 men and indirectly by three million to five million construction workers and shipping employees, was moved from July 1976 to no sooner than January 1977.

 Promulgation of a standard for lead, which the Government says is used in more than 120 occupations, was moved from July 1976 to March 1977. The adoption of noise standards was moved from this month to April 1977. A consultant for the Government recently estimated that if present standards remain in effect about seven million workers will have some hearing loss by the time they retire.
 The major cause cited in the safety and health agency's delay in publishing final standards was a requirement by the Ford Administration that an inflationary impact statement be prepared before promulgation of major new Federal regulations. An inflationary impact statement estimates the cost to industry of adopting a given proposal and supposedly the benefits that will be realized from it.

 The development of inflationary impact statements, mandated by an executive order of President Ford in November 1974, was challenged in a civil suit brought in Federal Court today by the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union.
 The union, which has 200,000 members, charged that the delays caused by the Ford Admin-stration's inflationary impact statement would "cause injury to the health and safety of virtually all American workers by continuing their exposure to unsafe working conditions and to excessive levels of toxic substances and harmful physical agents."

 Critics of the Ford Administration have long argued that the actual purpose of the inflationary impact statements was to slow down or stop regulations that the Administration did not want to impose on an industry that was too popular.
 Another criticism is that far more attention usually is given to the expense a proposal may impose on an industry than to its long-term benefits.

"The best savings plan is a Chase Combination Checking Plan."

"We moved our savings to Chase. Because with a Chase checking and savings plan we'll save dollars, not dimes.
 "Only Chase Combination Checking pays us a whopping 5.50% on our savings with a 90-day savings plan*, and gives us a choice of two ways to save on checking. It's like having two Chase Advantages in one."
 If you love to save money, just tuck $1,000 into a Chase 90-day savings plan and your checking is free. No per check charges. No monthly fees. No spending, just saving. So, while you're earning high interest on your savings, you're saving money with free checking. All together, Chase Combination Checking should put you over $80 ahead for the year.
 But you can start small and still be a big saver at Chase. With just $500 in savings you can have Dollar-A-Month Checking. You'll earn the same high interest on your savings and you can write all the checks you want for a flat dollar a month.
 So, if you write more than one check a month, it pays to move your savings to a Chase Combination Checking Plan.

COMPANIES ADMIT MESSAGE COPYING

NGTON, March 3 (AP)
 Officials of two interna-
 communications communication companies acknowledged today that they had cooperated with the National Security Agency in intercepting
 international messages.
 The companies, Western Union International, turned over to a House subcommittee of the House Government Operations Committee documents that Representative S. Abzug, Democrat of New York, had obtained.
 The subcommittee
 indicated listed countries whose cables had been intercepted and copied for the agency. It said that the program ended in 1973.
 R. Hawkins, chairman of the subcommittee, said that his committee had been involved in the plan from 1971 to 1973, but disasso-ciated itself from it after he learned about it.
 The companies decided to comply with a request
 by General Edward H.
 Rumsfeld for President Ford to refuse to testify before the House Government Operations subcommittee on international information and rights. They had refused to appear.
 S. Greenish, executive of Western Union International, testified that his company stopped international cables for the National Security Agency the messages it transmitted received still could be intercepted.
 "There is no step we can

Hearst Counsel Bid Court Exclude Tania Interview

BY WALLACE TURNER
SAN FRANCISCO, March 3—Hearst's counsel today sought to exclude from the evidence against her material that was taken from the Harris apartment.
The material involved in the so-called "Tania interview," a written account in which "Tania," as Miss Hearst was known for a part of her life underground, explains her conversion to the revolutionary views of the self-styled Symbionese Liberation Army, which had kidnapped her.
While Miss Hearst has denied that she was converted, this and other papers from the Harris apartment have been used by the Government to contradict her story that she was coerced throughout the time between her kidnapping and her arrest the day on which the search contested today was made.
F. Steele Langford, an Assistant United States Attorney, told Judge Oliver J. Carter, that the defense was attempting to climb aboard a successful suppression of evidence that the Harris won in Los Angeles State Superior Court, where they await trial on 11 counts, including kidnapping, assault and robbery.
Judge Carter said after hearing testimony and arguments that he would rule when court opens tomorrow at 10 A.M. F. Lee Bailey and Albert Johnson, Miss Hearst's lawyers in the defense to the charge that she willingly helped to rob the Sunset branch of the Hibernia Bank here on April 15, 1974, had not previously made a legal attack on the search of the Harris' apartment. They made no move until late yesterday, a day after Judge Mark Brandier in Los Angeles Superior Court granted a motion to suppress evidence against the Harris. That motion was drawn by Leonard Weinglass, legal advisor to Mrs. Harris, who acts as her own attorney.
The result of the defense move was that no evidence was presented today in Miss Hearst's trial, which had seemed to be moving rapidly toward conclusion of the Government's rebuttal to defense testimony. The jury was out of court all day, and the courtroom was empty all morning while lawyers read the transcript of Judge Brandier's evidentiary hearing on which the Los Angeles suppression order was based.
Court resumed in the afternoon, with the jury out, as Lawrence G. Lawler, assistant special agent in charge of the F.B.I. office here, testified to the events surrounding the arrest of the Harris and the search of their apartment.
The lack of a search warrant was the issue that moved Judge

Brandier to suppress, in the state trial, the evidence taken in the search last Sept. 18—guns, bomb parts, ammunition and writings—before the arrest, the Harris, who was under surveillance for 30 hours, during which time the F.B.I. could have obtained a warrant.
The Harris apartment was searched without searching the place and then got a warrant, after which they searched.
Some interesting aspects of the F.B.I. operations of Sept. 17-18 that led to the arrest of the Harris and Miss Hearst were glimpsed beneath the smooth surface of Mr. Lawler's account. A man and a woman were under surveillance. Mr. Lawler said that he got a glimpse of the woman, who was suspected of being Mrs. Harris, as they passed in a grocery store.
"I remember what I said later, because I've been reminded of it many times," the agent said. "I said, 'I don't know who that young lady is, but I'll guarantee you it's not Emily Harris.'"
The next day, Sept. 18, after agents picked up the two suspects as they returned from jogging at about 1 P.M., the woman was identified by fingerprints as Emily Harris.
The name Soliah quickly came into Mr. Lawler's testimony. Steven Soliah lived in the apartment where Miss Hearst and another fugitive, Wendy Yoshimura, were arrested about 6:30 P.M. Sept. 18. He is under indictment for a bank robbery in Sacramento. Some of the material that the defense seeks to block indicated that Miss Hearst wrote down a report of surveillance of a different bank in Sacramento, one 15, 1974, had not previously made a legal attack on the search of the Harris' apartment.
After two meetings Sept. 17, the F.B.I. decided to apprehend the couple if they went jogging the next day. That procedure was followed and, when the Harris were identified by fingerprints, agents were sent into the apartment, Mr. Lawler testified.
Their purpose was to prevent anyone who might be there from firing at the agents on the street and to search for "other fugitives."
Mr. Lawler said that the apartment door was padlocked, and an agent broke a window. Inside, agents found the apartment unoccupied and broke the hasp on a lock on a closet. Inside, they could see guns and what seemed to be other contraband.
The agents then left the apartment and obtained a search warrant before going into the apartment again and gathering the material that has now been suppressed as evidence against the Harris in state court and that Miss Hearst's lawyers sought to suppress here today.

Patricia Hearst is escorted to court in San Francisco by Glen E. Robinson, a Federal officer.

Answers by Miss Hearst in Lie Tests Are Questioned by Former Hogan Aide

By PETER KRIS
Lawrence, a retired New York City detective who was District Attorney Frank S. Hogan's lie-detector expert, said here yesterday that in his opinion there were indications of deception in answers Patricia Hearst gave in polygraph tests.
The challenged answers involved her denial that she had voluntarily joined in a bank robbery with her kidnapers.
But Mr. Laurondi, who had been scheduled to be a prosecution rebuttal witness at Miss Hearst's bank robbery trial in San Francisco, also said that it was to the credit of F. Lee Bailey, Miss Hearst's defense counsel, that he withdrew last Friday his request to show the jury the results of the tests.
Mr. Laurondi said "the public would have misconstrued and misinterpreted conflicting testimony by rival experts, who he said could have interpreted the test results differently."
The defense had Miss Hearst take the tests to bolster her contention that she had been coerced into taking part in the robbery. But last week, Mr. Bailey dropped his request for a hearing on his effort to get the test results introduced into evidence, contending that their use might be interpreted, on appeal, as a waiver of Miss Hearst's Fifth Amendment privilege against having to give self-incriminating evidence.
Reactions Tested
Polygraph tests graphically measure the physical reactions of a person to questions in an attempt to indicate whether he is telling the truth. Results of the tests are not admissible as evidence in the Federal Courts in the West.
Mr. Laurondi said, "Polygraph tests are an excellent investigative tool for the defense, prosecution and the courts, but we have not reached a time when we could submit the charts to a jury for their personal examination."
His own opinion after examining the charts, he said, is that Miss Hearst answered falsely in the negative when asked in the tests whether she most voluntarily participated in the bank robbery, and also in answering some other questions.

He said that he based this on the way "her blood pressure rose, her breathing faltered and slowed down, and the galvanic skin response registered more activity in her body."
Mr. Laurondi, 52 years old, retired from the Police Department last Oct. 16. He figured in a number of cases in which his use of polygraph tests helped to win dismissal of charges against initial defendants. One case he worked on was the 1963 murders of Janice Wylie and Emily Hofert. George Whitmore was first accused of the killings, but Richard Robles was later adjudged to be the killer.
Flew to Coast
Mr. Laurondi, who operates Certified Lie Detection Inc. at 299 Broadway and has applied for a state license as a private detective, said that he was telephoned Feb. 19 by Assistant United States Attorney David Bancroft, who told him that Mr. Bailey was moving to introduce lie-detector tests. He said that he flew to San Francisco last week and met with Assistant United States Attorney Edward P. Davis Jr.
Mr. Laurondi said that he was given copies of the graphs from tests given Miss Hearst by Charles Zimmerman of Boston and three other psychologists on Jan. 13, 14, 15 and 16.
The Jan. 13 test, he said, was held by the defense to be incomplete. The Jan. 14 and 15 tests, he said, were termed "exploratory" by the defense.
The Jan. 16 test was the only one to be offered as defense testimony. Mr. Laurondi contended there was no such thing as an "exploratory" polygraph test.
He said that he gave his opinion of "deceptive indications" to Mr. Davis and presumed that the defense he asked for any notes or tapes made in connection with the tests. This, he said, to a conference last Thursday in which he took part with Mr. Davis.

3 IN SUIT SAY DRUG PRODUCED CANCER

Mothers of Females on Book DES in Pregnancy
Complaining that they had developed cancer of the cervix because their mothers had taken DES, a drug widely used to prevent miscarriage, three Long Island residents filed $100 million in damage suits and a $1 billion class action for punitive damages in State Supreme Court yesterday against a score of major pharmaceutical companies and five physicians.
They identified the product as a synthetic estrogen known variously as diethylstilbestrol, stilbestrol and diestrol, which is administered as a pill during varying periods of pregnancy.
The plaintiffs also are seeking to force the companies to establish a $500 million special fund for the examination and treatment of women who have allegedly been injured by the drug and the creation of a research program to determine the cause, prevention and cure of cervical cancer.
DES, in use for more than 30 years for gynecological disorders and also as a contraceptive morning-after pill, is suspected by medicopers as a cause of cancer for the last several years. Jan. 9, the Food and Drug Administration proposed on the drug as a growth-lant in cattle or sheep.

The plaintiffs, all reside Nassau County, are 1 Boxer, 23 years old, of 1 shall Lane, Westbury; Margolis, also 23, of 730 Cort, Elmont; and Eli Tigue, 15, of 20 Prince Westbury. Miss Tigue's mother, Barbara Tigue, filed on her behalf. The physicians named defendants are Casar DeRex Lester Schnell, Jerome Der and Oscar Goldberg Nassau County, and Dr. Wasserman of 133 E. Street.
The defendant companies as follows:
E. R. # The civilized way to see Greece.

For the same kind of money you'd pay anybody else, Traveline gives you a whole lot more.

Which is, after all, only logical.

We happen to be the oldest, largest and—by far—most respected designer of vacations in Greece and the enchanting Greek Isles.

And, since Greece also happens to be our home, we've got friends there to help you every step of the way.

A welcoming party in Athens.

We've got 100 people alone whose main job is receiving passengers at the Athens airport.

Your baggage is collected for you. You're hustled through Customs and Immigration. Then whisked by one of our motorcoaches to your hotel.

Or directed to your connecting flight to wherever in Greece you're headed.

The Traveline VIP Travelcard.

Tucked away in your hip pocket or handbag, you'll also have the exclusive Traveline VIP Travelcard.

It's absolutely free, and brings you all sorts of special travel assistance from our hundreds of employees and affiliates scattered throughout Greece and the Greek Isles.

How to scare up a dentist at 3 a.m. in Corinth. Where to find the best bargains on Flokati rugs in Thessaloniki. Where to locate the prize-winning shish kebab on Mykonos. You're gone, yes. But never abandoned.

With a view on everything worth viewing.

Over the years, we've checked out hundreds of hotels at choice spots in Greece and neighboring Mediterranean countries.

Scrutinized them for comfort, service, cleanliness and ambience.

Of these, we've booked exclusive space (6000 rooms worth) at those meeting our tough standards.

Two hotels we're especially partial to—we happen to own them. The luxurious Amalia in Athens, and the Amalia-Delphi.

If we don't have space, you can be sure you'll get equivalent quality.

The main thing is, you'll never be caught wandering around without a place to hang your hat.

Our archaeologists will show you the sites.

One of our affiliates is world-famous Chat Tours, the No. 1 sightseeing company in Greece.

Each guide has a four-year college degree in archaeology. Knows the history and legends of Greece like you know the members of your immediate family. And, of course, is fluent in English.

You'll see all the archaeological sites—and the other sights—in plush comfort, too. In the most modern, air-conditioned pullman motorcoaches that money can buy.

The Traveline Fleet of Cruise Ships.

With our long-established connections in Greece, we've come to control exclusive space on some of the most luxurious cruise ships in the world.

The palatial Gripsholm (now called the Navarino). The beautiful Stella Solaris and Stella Maris. The new Castalia. The Aquarius, Azur, Royal Viking Star. In fact, on just about all the famous names.

It's pretty safe to say that if we can't get you a cabin, nobody can.

No charter flights, thank you.

While the cost of our vacations are often on a par with charter tours, Traveline clients go exclusively on scheduled Olympic Airways flights over the Atlantic.

With no ifs, buts, maybes or profuse apologies about departure times.

And, with Olympic, you get the lowest fare the law allows on a scheduled airline.

Send for the most complete vacation book ever written.

Our new 38-page, 67-picture, 15,000-word, multi-vacation book.

It's easily the most complete vacation book on Greece ever put together.

Here's a smattering of what you'll find.

19 Independent Vacations.

Vacations of enormous variety. In all price ranges. And most come with a cruise or two.

We offer you Athens, Classical Greece, the enthralling Greek Isles.

Plus many other plans that include Yugoslavia, Israel, Egypt, Turkey and other exciting lands.

Incidentally, we don't use "independent" as a euphemism for "packaged tour." On these vacations you do travel, for the most part, independently. Not as a group.

You won't be with the same people unless you want to be. It's all up to you.

Introducing Escorted Tours.

The sophisticated approach to seeing Greece as a native.

Your small, congenial group has its own private Traveline Tour Director and archaeologist from beginning to end.

Your Tour Director meets you in New York, where you're feted at a bon voyage party. You'll occupy a special section of your Olympic jet over the Atlantic. Be guests of honor at parties in Greece. And there's so much more.

You'll see the Greece that others only read about. With penetrating insight into the history and culture of this ancient land.

These are vacations of pure pleasure.

The pace is relaxed. Leisurely. In no way regimented.

And you've always got somebody else to worry about "details."

Or, spend a weekend building your own vacation.

If you're convinced that no pre-planned vacation is right for you, here's the perfect alternative.

Mr. Reagan claimed today another moral victory in the outcome of balloting in the Massachusetts and Vermont primaries yesterday. But his advisers, who had dreamed of dealing Mr. Ford early crushing blows, are now convinced that Mr. Reagan cannot retain his 11th Commandment position and still hope to defeat an incumbent they believe is vulnerable on fundamental issues.

Reagan 'Most Pleased'

In a statement released today, Mr. Reagan said that he was "most pleased" with the results of yesterday's primaries.

"In Massachusetts, we appear to have garnered more than 30 percent of the Republican vote, although we spent no money and made no appearances there," he said. "In con- sideration of the fact that we now feel that if trust, the President Ford Com- mittee is said to have sent something substantial, we in the neighborhood of $200-000. In addition, I am delighted of taking the party that we picked up 15 delegates, same road as 1964,

He said that the results in Vermont were equally gratifying. "Even though I did not enter the state's Republican voters' primary, I was able to write in my name," he said.

According to Reagan insiders, the original campaign strategy was based on the belief that Mr. Reagan could bring about a collapse of the Ford effort by putting together knockout blows in the early primaries has not been entirely abandoned.

As they see it, there is still a possibility, despite signs of a reversal in recent weeks, that Mr. Reagan retains enough of his big early lead in Florida to trounce the President there in next Tuesday's primary and will then move on to another big victory in Illinois the following week on the momentum provided by Florida.

But more and more the Reagan camp is turning to "scenario No. 2," which envisions Mr. Reagan's establishing the ability of his challenge in the first round of contests by "not losing badly anywhere he makes an effort," and by holding on until the May primaries in Southern and Western states where he has a "natural constituency," in the words of one strategist.

"If we don't win the big ones before May, we know we'll start whipping the President then, and then the whole thing will be decided in California," Mr. Sears said. He said that Mr. Reagan would be very strong in Texas, Alabama, Arkansas, Nebraska, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Montana, Nevada and Idaho.

He also expects the candidate to pick up delegates in Michigan, Mr. Ford's home state.

"All of us would have been much happier, of course, if we would have gotten a couple more thousand votes in New Hampshire last week," he said. "It has become increasingly apparent that Mr. Ford's victory in New Hampshire, even though narrow, has been of enormous significance in keeping his prestige intact and in giving him measurable momentum in the Florida race. It doesn't have a second choice, is also forcing Mr. Reagan into a new aggressive posture that may ultimately be the deciding factor in this campaign."

conference that "it will be a sad day for progressive forces" if Democrats have only a choice among Senator Jackson, Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama and Jimmy Carter of Georgia after the New York primary April 6.

"I'm the only show that's left in town," Mr. Udall said, referring to his status as a liberal.

However, Mr. Harris was not to be brushed off. "We're in all the way," Alex Goodwin, the Harris campaign director in New York, said shortly after he had spoken to the candidate by telephone.

"The bulk of our supporters, Mr. Goodwin said in explaining why the Harris campaign would continue despite a fifth-place showing in Massachusetts,

Some of the uncom- mitted slates are considered covert, supporters of Senator Hubert H. Humphrey. In addition, there are three slates openly backing the Minnesotan.

None of the names of the Presidential candidates will ap- pear on the New York primary voting machine. Instead, they will be represented by slates of delegates pledged to them at his state campaign headquarters, 335 Lexington Ave. Districts.

Only three months ago, the Arizona Democrat ran a distant third at the New Democratic Coalition endorsement conven- tion—behind Mr. Bayh and Mr. Harris. Arnold Weiss, chairman of the coalition, raised the possibility yesterday that a pre- viously scheduled coalition meeting March 21 could include an endorsement session.

However, Senator Jackson was still rated the front-runner here, not only because of the momentum of his victory in another industrial state but also because of his strong ap- peal to Jewish voters who would normally be expected to support the more liberal candidates in a Democratic pri- mary. ### Shopping Center Pickets United by High Court

INGTON, March 3—The more expansive Constitution that the Supreme Court majority followed the lead of the 1972 ruling, finding that under that ruling, the First Amendment was not applicable to this shopping center either. It said the dispute should be decided in accord with labor law, and that the N.L.R.B. should thus reconsider it.

Today, there were four opinions on the case.

One, the majority opinion written by Justice Potter Stewart, said that the 1972 case "cannot be squared with" the opinion in the 1968 case. "We make clear now," the opinion said, "if it was not clear before, that the rationale of Logan Valley [1968] did not survive the Court's decision in the Lloyd case [1972]."

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Harry A. Blackmun, Lewis F. Powell Jr. and William H. Rehnquist joined the opinion.

Justice Powell, however, also wrote a second opinion, joined by the Chief Justice, saying that he agreed that the 1972 case did not overrule the 1968 case. He also said that today's case could be "narrowly" distinguished from the 1968 case. He added, though, that the majority ruling "clarifies the earlier cases, and that 'this clarification of the law is desirable.'"

Separate Opinion by White

Justice Byron R. White wrote a brief opinion in which he concurred in the majority's ultimate judgment on today's case.

The fourth opinion was a dissent written by Justice Marshall and joined by Justice Brennan. The dissent said that the majority was taking "an overly formalistic view" of the relationship between the institution of private ownership of property and the free speech guarantees. When a private property owner opens his property to the public, the dissent said, the values usually associated with private property, such as the right of privacy, diminish. "Not only employees with a labor dispute, but also consumers with complaints against business establishments, may look to the location of a retail store as the only reasonable avenue for effective communication with the public," the dissent said. "As far as these groups are concerned, the shopping center owner has assumed the traditional role of the state in its control of historical First Amendment forums."

TRIAL QUESTIONS ON RACE CURBED

Supreme Court Defines Rights of Black Defendants

By LESLEY OELSNER
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, March 3—The Supreme Court ruled today that blacks facing state charges of crimes against whites do not generally have the right to have prospective jurors questioned about their possible racial prejudice.

They have this right, a five-man majority ruled, only where there are special circumstances in which racial issues are inextricably bound up with the case and in which it appears there is a "significant likelihood" that racial prejudice will infect the trial.

Similarly, the majority said, ethnic differences do not give an automatic right to have prospective jurors questioned about possible ethnic bias, at least in state, as opposed to Federal, trials.

The Constitution, it said, does not require this specific questioning "whenever there may be a confrontation in a criminal trial between persons of different races or different ethnic origins."

The ruling, handed down in the case of a Massachusetts black man convicted of various charges including assault with intent to kill a white security guard, directly contradicts what had appeared to many observers to be the clear implications of a 1973 Supreme Court ruling. In that case, in which the defendant was a black civil rights worker, the Court had reversed the conviction on the ground that the trial court had refused to question the jury panel about race.

The Court's two most liberal Justices, Thurgood Marshall and William J. Brennan Jr., dissented from the majority today. In a brief opinion written by Justice Marshall, they cited both the 1973 case and a 1981 ruling in which the Court had said that in Federal courts, blacks accused of killing whites had the right to the kind of jury questioning at issue.

Through its decision today, the dissenters said, "the Court emphatically confirms that the promises inherent in Ham [the 1973 case] and Aldridge [the 1981 case] will not be confirmed."

The majority opinion was written by Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., who was joined by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Potter Stewart, Harry A. Blackmun and William H. Rehnquist. Justice John Paul Stevens did not participate.

Justice Byron R. White joined in the result of the majority ruling, which reversed a deci-

Senate Panel Likely to Urge Strong Curbs on Domestic Spying

By NICHOLAS M. HORROCK
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, March 3—The draft of the final report of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence will contain strongly worded recommendations to control the domestic intelligence activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the electronic eavesdropping capabilities of the National Security Agency, Congressional sources familiar with the draft said today.

Two subcommittees of the select committee are putting the final touches on sections covering the committee's findings and recommendations that will be placed before the full committee for approval next week.

The final report of the committee's year-long investigation into abuses by United States intelligence agencies is expected to be about 1,500 pages in three separate volumes. One volume, the findings and recommendations, is expected to be made public by mid-March, according to committee sources.

Two other sections, one on foreign and military intelligence and the other on domestic intelligence activities, will be made public later, committee sources said.

Senator Frank Church, the Idaho Democrat who has led the committee through its exhaustive inquiry into the intelligence activities, declined to confirm whether the subcommittee preparing the draft would offer strong language on either the F.B.I. or the N.S.A.

He said, however, that he would support such recommendations. In a footnote, if his opinion. In a footnote, if "Although we hold that voir dire questioning [examination of jurors] directed to racial prejudice was not constitutionally required, the wiser course generally is to propound appropriate questions designed to identify racial prejudice if requested by the defendant. Under our supervisory power we would have required as much of a Federal court faced with the circumstances here . . . the states are also free to allow or require questions not demanded by the Constitution. In fact, the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts has suggested guidelines to Massachusetts courts for questioning about racial prejudice on voir dire."

The majority reasoned, however, that state court judges have broad discretion in examining prospective jurors, and that only in certain circumstances is it clear that racial prejudice could affect the outcome of the trial and that jurors thus must be asked about prejudice.

The majority distinguished the facts of the 1973 case from the facts of today's case. In the 1973 case, the defendant, on trial in South Carolina for possession of marijuana, was known in his community as a civil rights activist. His defense was that law enforcement officials had framed him on the marijuana charge in revenge for his civil rights work.

In today's case, the defendant, James Ross Jr. and two co-defendants were charged with armed robbery and assault and battery with intent to kill. The victim was a white man employed by Boston University as a uniformed security guard.

His committee and the press have uncovered evidence that the C.I.A. used the news media and religious institutions as a "cover" for agents and intelligence officers.

Earlier this year the Director of Central Intelligence, George Bush, ordered the C.I.A. to stop recruiting agents from or infiltrating religious groups or news organizations that are owned or generally circulated in the United States. An executive order by President Johnson in 1967 barred the C.I.A. from infiltrating educational groups.

Mr. Church said, however, that he believed these prohibitions would be more effective if they were solidified by legislation.

The Senator said he would urge members of his committee to back recommendations in the draft calling for legislation to set limits on the term of service of the directors of the C.I.A. and the F.B.I. According to committee sources, they are weighing recommendations that would set terms of office and appointment dates for these two posts that would remove them from the normal political patronage of changing Presidential administrations.

The committee, the Congressional sources said, is not expected to make public any new information about C.I.A. covert operations. In addition to its investigation of Chile operations it looked at activities in six foreign countries.

Reports on the operations in other countries will be turned over to permanent intelligence oversight committees, the sources said. The Senate select committee has already proposed a bill to create an 11-member Senate committee to oversee intelligence operations. The legislation is now wending its way through the Senate.

The findings, the Congressional sources said, will be brief statements of conclusions by the committee based on the evidence it has acquired over the year. One source said these findings would be "moderately harsh" as to the activities of the F.B.I., the N.S.A. and the C.I.A.

Early in the investigation, the committee staff dropped the idea of exposing covert C.I.A. operations other than those in Chile. Some committee sources said part of the reason was that they came to believe Chile would provide examples of techniques the C.I.A. used throughout the world.

Other sources said, however, that the committee had agreed not to expose other covert operations to get full information on them from the intelligence agencies.

Summary of Actions by Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, March 3—The F.P.C. argued that the procedure was designed to stimulate domestic exploration and development of natural gas reserves. A number of members of Congress led by John E. Moss, Democrat of California, and representatives of some public gas and power companies attacked the procedure as violative of Federal law. The Supreme Court, partly reversing a Federal Appeals Court, rejected the challengers' argument by vote of 6-0, with Justices Potter Stewart and Lewis F. Powell Jr. in addition to Justice Stevens, not participating. (F.P.C. v. Moss, No. 74-883).

A divided court ruled that the First Amendment's free speech guarantee did not bar the owner of a shopping center from prohibiting labor picketing in front of one of the stores within the shopping center. Justices Marshall and Brennan dissented. Justice Byron R. White concurred only in the result, not in the majority reasoning. (Hudgens v. N.L.R.B., No. 74-773).

WELFARE

Reversing a lower Federal court, the Court unanimously sustained a part of a New York welfare law that creates a rebuttable presumption that a person who applies for home relief assistance within 75 days of voluntarily quitting his or her job or reducing his or her earning capacity, has done so for the purpose of qualifying for assistance. Under the law, any person who quits a job or reduces earning capacity for this purpose is disqualified from getting the benefits for the next 75 days. (Layman v. Milne, No. 74-1137).

Future rates may change due to economic or regulatory reasons. Federal regulations require that a substantial penalty be imposed on permitted withdrawals made from a time deposit account prior to its maturity. Table amounts are based on maximum contributions.

Your Dollar Individual Retirement Account will make your retirement years richer.

Think of it, $290,641. But even more amazing is how easy it will be for you to build your fortune.

With a Dollar Savings Bank Individual Retirement Account (IRA, for short), we can help you set up a high-interest, tax-deferred retirement plan. If you're a wage earner or are self-employed, under 70½ years of age, and don't belong to a qualified pension plan, profit-sharing or other retirement plan (with the exception of Social Security, of course), you're eligible to open your own IRA.

With this account, you can set aside $1,500 or 15% of your annual income (whichever is less). If both husband and wife are eligible for an IRA, each can contribute up to $1,500 into their own individual accounts.

The advantages of your IRA.

Once you start contributing to your IRA, you'll be able to deduct your yearly contribution from your taxable income. Plus, you won't have to pay taxes on the interest your money earns, until the year you start withdrawing.

This account is available for a term of 6 or 7 years with minimum deposits of $100. With consent of the Bank, funds may be withdrawn between the ages of 59½ and 70½ or upon disability without premature penalty. (Money withdrawn before you reach 59½ will be subject to a federal tax penalty.)

Of course should you desire to make periodic contributions of smaller amounts we can tailor a plan to suit your needs.

The chart shows you just what these tax advantages mean in real dollars. After just five years of contributing $1,500 annually, your total savings plus interest would be $9,552. But without the tax advantages, the amount would be only $6,016. Now look at the 35-year line. An IRA account would be worth $290,641, while a non-IRA savings account would have only $109,266, a difference of over $181,374.

And since retired persons usually have a smaller income, you'll be taxed in a lower bracket. The above examples are based upon a yearly lump sum deposit of $1,500 by a tax payer in the 32% bracket into a Term Account earning 7.75% yielding 8.17% annually.

An IRA is simple to set up.

We'll be glad to help you set up your own IRA. You can make your contribution either directly or have your employer set up a payroll deduction plan.

Also, if you're about to receive a lump-sum settlement from a qualified pension plan because your employment there is ending, you can deposit this money in your IRA. If this is done within 60 days, you won't have to pay taxes or penalties on the money.

Having a large retirement fund is now clearly a reality. One that we can help you enjoy.

So send in the coupon or, better yet, come to your nearest Dollar Savings Bank office. We'll help you to start providing for a retirement that'll be richer than you ever dreamed possible.

Bill to Put State Lottery Under Tax Agency Stalls

By RONALD SMOTHERS
Special to The New York Times

ALBANY, March 3—An Assembly bill that would place the problem-plagued state lottery under the State Department of Taxation and Finance appeared temporarily stalled by the introduction of a very different proposal in the Republican-controlled Senate.

The Democratic-controlled Assembly had been poised to act on the measure twice this week, but postponed action. It was learned today that part of the hesitation stemmed from the fear that approval of the measure endorsed by the Governor would damage the Democratic prospects of keeping newly won upstate Assembly seats.

The Assembly lottery bill, in addition to transferring the Lottery Division, which had since 1973 been under the State Racing and Wagering Board, called for distribution of all lottery proceeds in excess of $60 million each year to supplement aid to local educational programs for the handicapped.

The Senate bill, on the other hand, would distribute all lottery proceeds to local school districts to supplement existing aid on the basis of $5 a student and $10 for each handicapped student.

In another development today, the rebellion among Democratic Assemblymen opposed to a $406,250 appropriation that would extend the life of the State Charter Revision Commission for New York City, continued and forced in a hard-won compromise with Democratic leaders that the rebelling legislators called a "victory."

The group, led by Assemblyman Alexander B. Grannis, of Manhattan, agreed to support the appropriation which is to sustain the commission through March, if the Assembly leadership pressed Governor Carey to reduce a $730,000 allocation to the commission in the state's 1976-77 budget. The rebelling Democrats got a promise of support for a $200,000 cut in the commission's coming year's allocation, a lowering of the per diem fee paid to the 14 commissioners, and a requirement that major commission expenditures be approved by the majority of the body.

Dr. John L. S. Holloman Jr., head of the Health and Hospitals Corporation, was among the witnesses.

Co-op Residents Prepay Taxes to Help the City

By FRANCIS X. CLINES

The residents of Penn South Houses yesterday joined the list of those helping the city by paying their real-estate taxes early—but with an altruistic distinction.

The residents, many of them elderly and retired garment workers, not only paid their taxes, but also waived the 8 percent tax discount that various business leaders had been granted as a sweetener by the city as they prepaid taxes and basked in words of civic praise in the last year.

Another important difference was that much of the $200,000 prepayment offered by the Manhattan housing cooperative came from hardy affluent residents who agreed to pay one month's housing costs early to help the city.

"I'll do all I can for this city," said one of the residents, Berna Zwerin, who was born in Kiev, Russia, and who has lived here for 60 years. She added: "My daughter graduated from Hunter College, another daughter went to City College and now my granddaughter's graduating from Juilliard and is getting a job with the Houston Symphony—all because of this city. This is my town. I'll never leave it."

For Michael and Paula Brenner, a handsome gray-haired couple—he had been a dressmaker and she an office worker—the prepayment meant putting up an extra $199.50 this month in payment of next July's carrying charges.

"We love New York, we love our development," said Mrs. Brenner. "We sit in the midst of New York City at 28th Street and Eighth Avenue, and we wanted to help the city."

CITY, BLUE CROSS SETTLE CONTRACT

Goldin Says Saving Could Be $10 Million in Year

By GLENN FOWLER
A year long dispute between the city and Blue Cross of Greater New York over a master contract for hospital insurance covering a million people—municipal employees, their dependents and retired workers—was settled yesterday.

Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin said the settlement afforded potential savings to the city in premium payments of as much as $10 million in the 1975-76 fiscal year. The city paid Blue Cross more than $77 million in 1974-75 for coverage of its work force.

The agreement, which is expected to be ratified by the Board of Estimate at its City Hall meeting today, is retroactive to last July 1. In December, after long negotiations between Blue Cross and the city's Department of Personnel had produced a contract calling for an average increase of 20 percent for the current fiscal year, the board refused to approve it.

Mr. Goldin said that savings of $4.4 million were assured in the City and that additional savings up to the $10 million figure would be forthcoming, he provided that a freeze on reimbursements paid by Blue Cross to hospitals, in effect since Jan. 1, was not terminated by the state.

John Byrnes, a spokesman for Blue Cross, said that in light of the freeze on hospital reimbursements, the contract would be fair to both Blue Cross and the city.

Under the new agreement, the city's monthly premium is $18.70 per covered employee. Should hospital rates rise by 12 percent or more despite the freeze, the premium would be as high as $19.84. It means an increase in the city of 10.5 to 17.2 percent over last year and the city's total premium for the current fiscal year would be $92.5 million.

U.S. Rejects Some Parts Of Carey's Medicaid Plan

Mr. Berger said the state would go to court to get this step implemented, if necessary. The Federal Government also rejected as an improper delegation of authority a state proposal to have the state Budget Director suspend payments on especially costly hospital stays by Medicaid patients. Mr. Berger said he could resolve this objection by retaining the power himself.

Other objections involved some of the following: the state's move to freeze hospital reimbursement costs; a proposal no longer to pay for some elective surgery; a proposal to discontinue payments for post-surgery hospital stays of more than 20 days; a proposal to cut emergency room rates by 10 percent, and a proposal to limit presurgery hospital stays to one day.

HOSPITALS' CUTS STIR HOT DEBATE

Impact Called Exaggerated at Hearing, but Holloman Defends His Assessment

By DAVID BIRD

The effect of the financial crisis on the city's municipal hospitals was hotly disputed at a hearing held yesterday by the City Council's Health Committee.

The Health and Hospitals Corporation, which runs the municipal system, was accused by Joel Harnett, chairman of the City Club of New York, of trying to "panic the public" through forecasts of health-care crises.

Mr. Harnett, long a critic of the municipal hospital system, said the corporation "has threatened or actually closed clinics, emergency services and other facilities vital to health care."

"They shy away from the basic job of trimming their under-used hospitals or reforming their staffing practices," he added.

Dr. John L. S. Holloman Jr., the corporation's president, who often has warned that the budget cuts forced on him would create a health emergency, based out at "those irresponsible and uninformed agencies and individuals who seek to mask the impact of these cuts of health services in unproven, unsubstantiated allegations of inefficiency and waste."

Ending of Jobless Pay for Strikers Urged

Special to The New York Times

ALBANY, March 3—The state Commerce Commissioner suggested to the Assembly's Democratic leadership today that its proposal to reform the state's unemployment insurance system and increase benefits might be more acceptable to business and the Republican-controlled Senate if it included the abolition of unemployment insurance payments for strikers.

The Commissioner, John S. Dyson, made the suggestion in a meeting today with the Assembly majority leader, Albert H. Blumenthal of Manhattan, who had sought ways of defusing the vehement opposition to the proposal, which was said to have been introduced to start discussions. Also involved in the meeting was Richard Richardson, executive director of the Governor's Economic Development Board.

Mr. Dyson, who has been the most outspoken advocate of policies seeking to keep business in the state, emphasized that his suggestion did not represent the views of the Governor or his top advisers.

He said that the Governor regarded the Assembly proposal seriously and that aides were still reviewing it.

But some people here noted that the pairing of the elimination of benefits for strikers with the Assembly proposal to increase benefits generally, grant dependency allowances and eliminate the current experience-rating system of determining employee contributions could be the "kiss of death" for any reform of unemployment insurance system.

Film: 'Beyond the Grave'

4 Episodes Delve Into a Nether World

By RICHARD EDER

In the decrepit antiques shop that links the four episodes of "From Beyond the Grave" the rule is count your change carefully. Not because the cadaverous proprietor, a man with all kinds of spooky and disagreeable resources at his command, will cheat. But dreadful things happen to customers who try to cheat him. The movie, which opened yesterday at neighborhood theaters, demonstrates them.

John Collier used to write lovely short stories about this kind of thing, drawing odd and ironic genies out of his old bottles. The episodes in "Grave" are based on stories by R. Chetwain-Hayes, are crude and obvious. Each punch is telegraphed, each twist is a stranglehold. They overcompensate with blood for their lack of deftness. And the blood is rotten quality: dark, transparent stuff.

However, the producers have hired some distinguished and underworked British actors for several of the parts. In spite of the blood, none of the episodes goes much below a certain harmless tedium. And in one or two cases the actors bring in a real if momentary liveliness. By far the best is "The Elemental," and the reason is the late Margaret Leighton. She is a medium brought in to exorcise a nasty spirit that has embedded itself in the stuffy left shoulder of a businessman, played by Ian Carmichael.

Dance: A Spicy 'Carmen'

Harlem Troupe Blends Humor and Calypso

By ANNA KISSELOFF

"Carmen and José," a ballet by Ruth Page, is probably the only version in which George Bizet's heroine dies with her leg extended to the side a la seconde.

Miss Page is nothing if not theatrical. During her career as a pioneer builder of American ballet since the 1930's (a career properly honored in a current exhibition at the Library of the Performing Arts at Lincoln Center) Miss Page has shown a fondness for conveying operatic ideas into ballets. Some years ago, she created this version of "Carmen" in Chicago for the Dance Theater of Harlem.

"Carmen and José" had its local premiere Tuesday night at the Uris Theater in the third program of the Dance Theater of Harlem's current season.

Briefly stated, this is one of the best ballets seen here in a long time. It is never, never boring, which is more than can be said about many other works, and its humor—sometimes intentional and sometimes not—gives it that special Pagelike theatricality.

"Carmen and José" is a ratatouille of epic ideas, and it is to the credit of the Dance Theater of Harlem's dancers that they kept the ratatouille from getting overcooked. Naturally, this is not the Carmen we last saw in Seville. The setting is somewhere in the Caribbean. The score has been cut up, given an occasional calypso beat and arranged by Tania Leon. And if Delia has provided the costumes and the abstract slide projections that appear on three screens behind the characters.

If all this suggests that choreography is the junior partner here, it is true. The action is schematic but direct. Carmen, danced by the long limbed Lydia Abanca with a fine airy air, has no trouble seducing José, eloquently acted by Roman Brooks. Carmen's opposite number, Micaela, is here called Mickey, and Miss Page has turned her into a bespectacled beribboned school girl.

No one was entrained by a book, and the piquant Gayle McKinney carries one when she enters as the symbol of purity and chastity. Most of the real dancing goes into the classical variation with a Spanish flavor that Paul Russell pulls off with flair as Escamillo, the torador.

The plot is diverted from the original (although other choreographers have taken this tack) by having an allegorical masked figure of Death stalk the protagonists. William Scott's performance

The Pop Life

Women Are Shaping Music of the 70's

By JOHN ROCKWELL

It's a tempting generalization—too tempting, no doubt—to suggest that if men were the innovative shapers of pop music in the 1960's, women have taken over that role in the 1970's.

Of course, one can immediately rush into the breach with examples of important male composers and performers. Still, women determine more and more where pop music is going these days, particularly the thoughtful, quasi-experimental forefront, the sort of music not overtly concerned with top-40 success.

Among the women a rough polarization between rural and urban music can be perceived, and a very vague association of rural music with Los Angeles and urban music with New York. By rural music, one thinks of a folksy sort of country rock, epitomized by the music Linda Ronstadt sings. The urban musicians divide into rockers of the Patti Smith sort and, more frequently, nostalgists.

By nostalgist one doesn't mean the archly camp sort of New York cabaret recycler, although one must admit that, as in many other matters of contemporary style, homosexuals have paved the way.

But the way has been taken over now by former 60's folkies who never accepted the rougher music of rock. The whole history of the commercial folk movement in the last 20 years would make a wonderful book. People like Peter, Paul and Mary and Simon and Garfunkel were ostensibly "folk singers." But what they really were were close Broadway composers or jazz-pop musicians of the kind that dominated American music before the war.

There has been a slew of records recently to help document some of these notions.

Carole King (who's at the Beacon Theater this weekend) started life as one of that teeming crowd of New York-based rhythm-and-blues songwriters. As a performer, she has settled rather too firmly into a relaxed, funky-folk groove, and her new album, "Throughbred," doesn't disturb the pattern.

The best of Miss King's post-"Tapestry" albums remains "Really Rosie," just because it ventures farthest afield. But despite a certain overfa-

Ginger Rogers at Waldorf, Gracious and Predictable

By HOWARD THOMPSON

First things first. How does Ginger Rogers look in her new act at the Waldorf-Astoria? Fine. Her figure is trim, sheathed in an array of stunning gowns. The legs that glided alongside Fred Astaire in those movie musicals are still beautiful. And Miss Rogers still dances, now flanked by four limber young men, like an angel.

She is also a gracious, warm woman, frankly determined to please the people out front, and it is this blast-furnace hospitality that makes the evening. However, to get critical—and the Empire Room's plump prices might justify it—the curable star's 90-minute act is less than divine. As a program of song, dance and career nostalgia, it lacks the compact originality of a previous Hollywood evening at the Waldorf with Cyd Charisse and Tony Martin, staged by Ron Field.

Introduced as a Charleston contest winner from Texas, Miss Rogers sweeps in radiant in black satin and furs and settles the vocal tone of the evening by singing some "now" tunes in a voice best described as friendly. But at midpoint, just as the show begins to give recent work of such directors as Jean-Luc Godard and Agnes Varda as well as that of lesser-known film makers.

tomarily broken up and sold for its individual pieces. Thomas Girtin's views of Paris, for instance, or the Ackermanns "Cabinet" — is likewise not going to be handed away. None of this affects the fact that many of the books in this show are still greatly undervalued both as works of art and as articles of commerce. Some of them form a subsection of the antiquarian book market, and one which few collectors of art have learned to penetrate. People in England would cut their throats for a water-color by John Sell Cotman, the Norwich master, but Cotman's books of architectural studies are still neglected. Even in John Constable's centenary year, Lucas's engravings after Constable cause few pulses to beat faster. Turner is tops in British art for just about everyone, but when we see the engraving of the tower of Dudley in 1832 in Mr. Ray's collection we realize that it is in his books as much as anywhere else that Turner is the unsurpassed master of 19th-century England. Nowhere is the inferno of the industrial revolution more vividly portrayed. Mr. Ray's holdings are very strong in the area in which the illustration counts for more than the book. William Daniell's plates for Richard Ayton's "Voyage Round Great Britain" just cries out to be set free from its binding and put up on the wall, for instance. But there are also books where the text strikes back at the images and holds its own, notably the Mexican "Poems of Tennyson" of 1857, where poet and dinner meet on equal terms. And Mr. Ray comes near to the practice of our own time with productions like those of the Engraving Press, where Camille and Lucien Pissarro strove for an ideal mating of word and image. The choice of 1914 as teriminal date means that in the home stretch there is a lot of wistful low-keyed work that sinks to the level of period trash. An English connoisseur may be permitted to grieve that the curtain should come down on a twentieth-century artist like Jessie M. King when British book illustration in this century can show fine work by Wynstan Lewis, Paul Nash, Anthony Gross, Edward Bawden and John Piper. Scholarship is all very well, and neglected artists should doubtless be given a fair run, but the final section of this fascinating show has a foreign provincial look that was merely temporary. Those were dismal times, in which even Gordon Craig, who was as gifted as an illustrator as he was a producer and stage designer, could not find a market for his books. Better chronology! Mr. Ray and the library could have kept going for another half a century.

ready becoming urbanized—to the father's shame and horror. In contrast to the rigid Bartons are their amiable next-door neighbors, out-spoken Aunt Lizzie and her nephew, Eustace, a good-natured, ebullient country boy. There is material here for a potent social drama exploring class consciousness, the drive for—and the fight against—assimilation and black-against-black racism. "Eden" does have its evocative moments. The novelty of the subject matter and the excellence of the performance hold our attention. But the play has serious motivational problems and an extremely questionable resolution. "Eden" begins effectively. Mr. Carter, who is the director of the playwrights workshop at the N.E.C., has a gift for indigenous language and character. The American blacks speak a slangy patois (they call themselves "homeys"), whereas the West Indians speak elegantly. Walking in on an innocent though boisterous family gathering, the father exclaims, "Bachanals! Bachanals in the home!" Love blooms in the hallway — the city substitute for country porches — between Eustace and Ametta, the younger Barton daughter. The courtship is sweet. We mostly look, few words. We can feel the mutual attraction (particularly as the characters are played by Samuel Art Williams and Skylene Brown), and we can see the roadblocks ahead. Eustace hustlers in during a Barton family dinner to declare his intentions and is summarily dismissed. Then the father suddenly turns into a monster. He brutally whips his daughter—and no one intervenes. He completely loses any chance for audience sympathy. As the abused daughter accepts the punishment and confesses to her savior that she respects her father, we begin to think of her as a simpleton. Much later, the two young people marry, and in a split-second reversal of character — the likable

Eustace becomes a boor, and Ametta, with one look at her husband's "pool-room friends," melodramatically decides that her future belongs to her father. Too late Mr. Carter has tried to show that there are two sides to this story—that the father may, after all, be right. This is a conclusion that is not justified by the events that preceded it. As director, Edmund Cambridge is attentive to atmospheric detail and to nuances that convince us that we are watching a real family, not a company of actors. The cast plays with absolute conviction, even when credibility is being stretched. In addition to Mr. Williams, whose Eustace has a euphoric self-confidence somewhat reminiscent of a Muhammad Ali, and Miss Brown as Ametta, there are impressive characterizations by Ramona King as the "sensible" older sister, Barbara Montgomery as sassy Aunt Lizzie and Graham Brown, who gives an assertive performance as the tyrannical father.

S RAISED R'S DEATH Police Study a Gang Link in Shooting of 4 in Queens

Three rival street gangs were cited by the police in Queens yesterday as possibly having been involved in the shooting of four men Tuesday night in an in-crowded lobby of a public school in Springfield Gardens.

The four men, who were taken to Queens General Hospital and Jamaica Hospital, were shot in what Detective Lieut. William Molinari said had apparently been the culmination of an argument between two youths in the lobby of Intermediate School 59, at 132-55 Ridgedale Street.

Lieutenant Molinari said that at least five shots had been fired from at least three guns while members of the evening community center attempted to flee. The detective said it could not be determined whether those who had been shot were members of gangs involved in the dispute or innocent bystanders.

The center, operated by the Board of Education's Continuing Education Program, has 300 members, about three-quarters of them young men, with an average nightly attendance of 150 to 175 youths between the ages of 15 and 21.

Norman Drucker, director of the program, said that about 9 P.M. Tuesday, Ben Hanley, the teacher in charge of the sports, recreation and social program, saw two youths arguing in the vestibule of the four-story brick building. When he was unable to resolve the dispute, Mr. Hanley decided to close the center a half-hour early because he feared violence, and he led some of the youths into an empty classroom.

Hearing shots, Mr. Hanley

tried to call the police, but could not get to a telephone. He turned in a fire alarm.

After those who had fired the shots fled, taking their weapons with them, the police were called, and the injured men were taken to the hospitals.

Harsh Words Exchanged

Lieutenant Molinari said there had been some harsh words in the last few weeks between members of the Black Skulls, the Seven Crowns and the Linden Boys, rival gangs in the area. He said he believed that these had led to the confrontation and the shootings.

"I can't say whether this was any major gang confrontation," the lieutenant added. "It doesn't look like the beginning of any gang war. I believe it was an isolated incident by two people in dispute. However, we will be watching the gangs closely."

He asked that anyone with information about the shooting call 978-4866.

Those shot were Irving Stuart, 21, of 131-63 231st Street, Laurelton, Queens, with a gunshot wound in the face, and Nolen Hardwick, 20, of 181-28 113th Street, Jamaica, Queens, with a stomach wound, both in Queens General Hospital, and John Slight, 24, of 245 Beach 15th Street, Far Rockaway, Queens, who underwent a four-hour operation for stomach wounds in Jamaica Hospital, and Robert James, 21, of 153-22 122d Avenue, South Jamaica, with a gunshot wound in the face. Mr. James refused treatment and walked out of the emergency room of Jamaica Hospital. The others were in guarded to fair condition last night.

EX-PARK OFFICIAL ON L.I. IS INDICTED

Charged With Extortion in Award of Towing Work

By MAX H. SEIGEL

A former high official of the Long Island State Parks and Recreation Commission was indicted yesterday by a Federal grand jury in Brooklyn on charges of extorting more than $30,000 from five towing companies in exchange for giving them franchises.

The official, John McGrath, who retired as park maintenance supervisor in 1974, also was indicted on charges of income-tax evasion and the filing of false returns for 1969 through 1973. An assistant United States attorney, Kenneth J. Kaplan, said that during that period Mr. McGrath had about $70,000 in income that he did not report.

According to the indictment, Mr. McGrath exacted payments ranging from $1,000 to $6,000 a year from the five towing companies in return for allotting them exclusive towing rights over sections of the 208 miles of Long Island highways controlled by the Parks Commission.

It charged that one of the Long Island towing companies, Auto Center of 63 Smith Street, Hempstead, paid Mr. McGrath $6,000 in 1968, $1,000 in 1969 and in 1970 and $1,500 a year from 1971 through 1973. Victor LaGuardia, owner of the company, testified at the grand jury hearing and was subsequently indicted last September on four counts of perjury.

The indictment of Mr. McGrath also charged that from 1970 through 1973 he received $5,500 from each of three other companies — Charlie's Auto Center of North Bellmore, Al-ray Collision Corporation of Garden City Park and Russo Brothers Service Station, East Northport. In addition he was charged with receiving $3,500 from Sal Gullio's Garage in Lindenhurst, N.Y.

The United States Attorney for the Eastern District, David G. Trager, said that yesterday's indictment was the result of a year and a half of investigation by his office, with the help of Salvatore Contarino, special agent of the Internal Revenue Service. The investigation is continuing.

In Babylon, John G. Sheridan, general chairman of the Parks Commission, said he was cooperating with the United States Attorney's investigation. He said that towing franchises now were being given on the basis of competitive bidding and that the successful bidders would be announced April 1.

Tale of Magnus Eisengrim

By CHRISTOPHER LEHMANN-HAUPT

WONDERS. By Robertson Davies. Viking, $8.95.

It is no surprise that Robertson Davies produced, in "World of Wonders," a third novel in the series with "Fifth Business" and "The Rebel in the Raiment." The latter two novels have helped to draw national attention on the distinguished man of letters who in the past has been known for his play-acting, his wit, and his sharp tongue. "World of Wonders" is a serious novel, but it is also a novel of ideas. It is a novel that is both a challenge and a reward. It is a novel that is both a challenge and a reward. It is a novel that is both a challenge and a reward.

Robertson Davies

Like to know about him, especially since he holds the key to the mystery of that pink stone. Now the plot-machinery that Mr. Davies employs to tell Eisengrim's story may be a trifle on the gratuitous side. The illusionist recalls his past in order to provide the Stanislavskian "subtext" for the role he is playing in a BBC-sponsored television film about a 19th-century French magician. And what we learn about Eisengrim's early career seems tawdrily exotic in summary. As a boy, he was kidnapped and forcibly apprenticed by a sodomite-conjuror in a traveling carnival called the World of Wonders. As a young man, he caught on as a stand-in for an actor-manager whose troupe had fossilized the Romantic tradition of Henry Irving. And his final professional break came when he befriended the ugly daughter of a wealthy Swiss industrialist who had hired Eisengrim to repair a collection of mechanical toys.

A Surprising Power

But the industrialist's daughter turns out to be Lieselotte Naegeli, one of the most intriguing characters in the entire trilogy (though she is perhaps the ugliest woman in the world, she has a surprising power to make men love her). His young hero's stint with the acting company provides Mr. Davies with the opportunity to draw an evocative picture of cultural life in the Canadian provinces. The carnival troupe is the most colorful I've ever come across in that long and seedy tradition. Mr. Davies knows every trick of the carry trade and has filled the show with fascinating grotesqueries (for instance, the fat lady, Happy Hannah, enjoys regaling her audiences with the wit and wisdom of the Bible: "The liberal soul shall be made fat"; Proverbs 11, 25, she is wont to remind them). And whenever Eisengrim pauses in his monologue to argue with the film makers about illusion, autobiography, egoism, the differences between magicians in the 19th and 20th centuries, and the merit of the "fusian" Romantic acting tradition, Mr. Davies's narrative is no less entertaining.

Does the mystery of that pink stone in Boy Staunton's mouth ever get cleared up? As a matter of fact, it does, after the film maker and his crew go home and Magnus Eisengrim, Liesel Naegeli, and Dimstan Ramsey, the trilogy's narrator, retire to bed together to talk about old times. But I'm not too certain it matters anymore, just as I can no longer tell for sure if the individual volumes of this trilogy can be read by themselves. Just in case it does matter, I won't repeat Eisengrim's explanation of how Boy Staunton came to his peculiar death that night that now seems so long ago. But I suspect that by the time you get to it—with or without having read "Fifth Business" and "The Magician"—you'll be too diverted by the other wonders in Robertson Davies's world to care very much any more.

Herman Schwartz, Governor Carey's appointee as chairman of the State Commission of Correction, at a hearing in Albany yesterday.

Schwartz Appears to Be Headed for Defeat in Albany

The deciding vote in the Crime and Correction Committee was cast by the chairman, Ralph J. Marino, Republican of Syosset, L.I. With six members in favor of Mr. Schwartz and five against, Senator Marino had the choice of tying the vote or making it 7 to 5 in the nominee's favor. Explaining his decision at a news conference today, Mr. Marino said that while he believed Mr. Schwartz to be a very capable, brilliant person, as well as "sincere and highly motivated as an advocate of prisoners' rights," he was not convinced that Mr. Schwartz was "capable of the sound judgment and administrative ability necessary to steer corrections policy in this state." Specifically, Senator Marino cited several actions Mr. Schwartz had taken since Governor Carey named him to the commission chairmanship last August, especially the hiring of three former offenders as prison investigators and a request by Mr. Schwartz to the State Parole Board for parole of an inmate who had been convicted of murdering a police officer.

That request—in which Mr. Schwartz told the Parole Board he was considering hiring the inmate, Frank Lott, for his staff—indicates a propensity to ward an inmate's point of view above and beyond his position as Correction Commissioner, Senator Marino said. The six votes in favor of Mr. Schwartz, who is a 44-year-old law professor long active in prison reform, came from all five Democrats on the committee and one Republican, Roy M. Goodman of Manhattan. All the negative votes were Republican. Senator Marino said that he recognized the "polarization" that existed over the nomination, but that the vote had not been partisan and should not be taken as a "set-back" for prison reform. Senator Marino said that he and other Republicans on the committee could support Mr. Schwartz for one of the two other positions on the commission, in which he would not have the administrative responsibilities of the chairmanship. Mr. Schwartz himself, who declined to comment on the committee's vote, said that he might consider such a change but that the offer would have to come from the Governor. Mr. Carey said he would not make the change and intended to keep pressing for his nominee's confirmation as chairman. Mr. Schwartz's nomination drew wide support from prominent law school deans and bar association officials, as well as from civil liberties and prisoner-reform groups. He was vigorously opposed by county sheriffs who administer the local jails that the Correction Commission is supposed to regulate as a watchdog for the entire state prison system. Mr. Schwartz presided today over a public hearing on new regulations for the local jails and the Correction Commission promulgated earlier this year, to take effect May 1. Several local sheriffs testified that the regulations, in the words of Sheriff Wilbur K. Sherwood of Orange County, would place "an unreasonable financial burden" on local jails and pose a "dangerous threat to safety and security." Besides Senator Goodman, the committee members voting in favor of Mr. Schwartz were the following: all Democrats; Emanuel R. Gold of Queens, the ranking minority member; Robert Garcia and Joseph L. Galber of the Bronx; Franz S. Leichter of Manhattan and Karen S. Burstein of Woodmere, L.I. Those opposed, in addition to Senator Marino, were the following Republican Senators: Edwyn E. Mason of Hobart; James T. McFarland of Buffalo; Lloyd H. Paterson of Niagara Falls; Dale Volker of Depeew and Frederick L. Warder of Geneva.

MINNESOTA AGENCY WON'T SHUT RESERVE

ROSEVILLE, Minn., March 3 (AP) — New health evidence does not justify an order to shut down the Reserve Mining Company plant at Silver Bay, Minn., the state Pollution Control Agency decided yesterday. The board voted 8 to 0 not to use its emergency powers under state law to shut down the plant, because of air and water discharges containing asbestos-form fibers. There has been medical evi-

denance in Federal court on apparent increases in lung cancer because of inhalation of such fibers by workers and persons living near asbestos plants, but the relationship of those studies to the Reserve situation is still in question, the board was told by Peter Gove, executive director of the agency.

Mr. Gove said the possibility remained open that a closing could be ordered, or an order to shut down Reserve might be requested in Federal court. If additional evidence on health hazards of asbestos fibers warrants such action.

At Viking Control, the First Landings on Mars Are Being Experienced—in Simulation

By JOHN NOBLE WILFORD

PASADENA, Calif., March 2—Their spacecraft are still millions of miles from Mars, cruising quietly in the cold, black interplanetary medium, but Viking Project engineers and scientists are already getting the strange feeling that they have already done it all—the orbiting of Mars and the landing, photographing the Martian surface and sampling the soil in search of life.

The feeling is so compelling that Dr. Thomas A. Mutch, a Brown University geologist who is leader of the lander imaging team, left Viking Control on a night filled with excitement and clutching the first "surface photographs." His camera was working. The pictures were flawless. By the time he got home Dr. Mutch was euphoric—until his wife reminded him, "But, dear, it's only a simulation."

Indeed, Viking 1 is 15 million miles away from Mars, which it should orbit on June 19. Viking 2 is 18 million miles from Mars and its August rendezvous. They have been on their journeys from earth since last August and September, respectively, and all appears to be going well for what should be the first successful landings on Mars and the first search for signs of life on another planet.

To make sure that everyone in the 750-person Viking flight team knows exactly what to do when that time comes, James S. Martin Jr., the project manager, has conducted an "all-systems" simulation to "exercise the entire team." The simulation started Feb. 20, included a "Mars landing" Feb. 22 and ended yesterday.

It was "a fantastic success," proclaimed Mr. Martin, as he looked out of his glass-enclosed office and watched great folds of computer print-outs flowing from machines in one room and flight controllers working at their consoles in another, dimly lit room.

This was the hub of Viking Control, a windowless, three-story building on the lower slopes of the San Gabriel Mountains. From this building, at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here, the signals went out to land unmanned spacecraft on the moon and fly picture-taking probes to the environs of Mercury, Venus and Mars. Now the streams of numbers and of zig-zagging graph lines flickering on small television screens were cryptic messages indicating that the simulations for the Viking landings on Mars were running smoothly.

Full-Scale Model

Problems were uncovered, Mr. Martin said of the simulation, but nothing major. The computer program had to be redesigned to facilitate "uplink commands" to the spacecraft cameras. It was found that more time had to be allowed for certain ground control and data processing procedures.

A. Thomas Young, the mission director, remarked "We're proving to ourselves that we can do it."

A full-scale engineering model of a Viking lander, complete with operational cameras, stands in a nearby building. Two of its spindly legs rest on a simulated Martian surface of coarse-grained sand and a scattering of large rocks.

Some pranksters on the Viking team got three trilobites (marine fossils from the Paleozoic period) and placed them in the sand within the camera's field of view.

When the camera was switched on to transmit after the simulated landing, the first picture reaching Viking Control gave Dr. Mutch and his imaging team a momentary start, but they were not fooled. One scientist immediately identified the objects as trilobites. The joke turned out to be a source of satisfaction, for it demonstrated that even tiny objects near the Viking landing site should show up clearly in the pictures from Mars.

Odds of Finding Life

Dr. Harold P. Klein of Ames Research Center in Mountain View, Calif., one of the project's scientists, said that among the six biologists on the project the odds of there being life on Mars ranged from an optimistic one chance in 10 to a pessimistic one chance in a million. Dr. Klein's own betting is "one chance in 50."

But Dr. Klein believes that the odds of Vikings finding life on Mars are even higher. He estimates that it will be a minimum of 37 days after the landing before the biologists can possibly conclude that there is or is not life on Mars. More than likely, he said, it would take several months.

The problem of interpreting and reporting data pertaining to the question of Martian life concerns all the scientists and project officials. They know that the public will want a quick and unequivocal answer—"Like asking Columbus, as soon as he jumped off the ship, if there was gold." Mr. Young said.

An Orbiter and a Lander

Each four-ton Viking is actually two vehicles in one—an orbiter and a lander. The Jet Propulsion Laboratory, which is operated for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration by the California Institute of Technology, designed the orbiter. Langley Research Center, a NASA facility at Hampton, Va., designed the lander and has overall direction of the project. The spacecraft were built by the Martin-Marietta Corporation.

After Viking 7 goes into an orbit of Mars June 19 and reconnoiters the planned landing site, the landing craft is to separate from its orbiting vehicle and descend to a soft landing by means of parachutes and braking rockets. The scheduled landing time: 9:40 P.M., Eastern daylight time, July 4, 1976. The place: a basin near a channel that appears to have been gouged out by the flow of water sometime in the distant Martian past. The basin is in the region known as Chryse, which is situated at 20 degrees north latitude and 34 degrees west longitude. Project officials caution that "everything has to go right—the orbital maneuvers, the Martian weather, the photographic inspection of the site—to accomplish the landing on the nation's 200th birthday. When Mariner 9 arrived in Martian orbit in 1971, a global dust storm obscured the planet's surface for several weeks and delayed the start of the spacecraft's mapping photography. Could Stay in Orbit

The Vikings could hold in orbit for weeks or even months, if necessary, to await favorable landing conditions or search for a smoother landing site.

Dr. Gerald A. Soffen, chief scientist of the project, said: "If there's one thing I lie awake at night about, it's the possibility that we lose the first lander. I would be satisfied if we got only one successful landing, but if we lost the first one, we will have to change some of our plans and play the second one much more conservatively."

The site of the second landing, scheduled for Sept. 4, is in a northerly latitude, close to the polar region where there is evidence of more water vapor in the atmosphere. This fact is the reason the site is called "the biology target."

But there are more risks in going to the second site. While there were high resolution Mariner 9 photography and earth-based radar profiles as the basis for the first site selection, the project planners had only photographs and radar of the Viking 1 site. The radar gives a more detailed picture of the roughness of the terrain.

Project officials would like to do this week to have new radar data of potential landing sites "just south of the Martian equator. They expect to select a back-up landing site—a place to go if the

any reason, the mission depends on only one vehicle.

But most of the at Viking Control for a more optimistic the mission's progress. "Though the vehicle built to Mars means times of six months and three months on the surface. Mr. Martin ready picking of plan a mission. The project would like to do this week to have new radar data of potential landing sites "just south of the Martian equator. Killebrew Turns In Bat for Microphone

After 22 seasons in the American League, Harmon Killebrew, whose 573 home runs places him fifth on major league baseball's career list, announced his retirement yesterday. The 39-year-old slugger from Payette, Idaho, will become a color commentator on the Minnesota Twins' games for an independent television station, WTCN, in the Minneapolis area.

Killebrew, a designated hitter for the Kansas City Royals last season, had signed to play with the old Washington Senators out of high school. He stayed with the club when it was moved to Minnesota until he was released and signed by Kansas City as a free agent.

ABC-TV announced that Bob Uecker, the color commentator for the Milwaukee Brewers, had been selected as a broadcaster for ABC's coverage of major league baseball this season, along with Bob Prince, who was associated with the Pittsburgh Pirates for 28 seasons. They join Warner Wolf, who signed a long-term contract with ABC last season, as Uecker will be replaced in Milwaukee by Ray Scott, who is leaving Minnesota and being replaced by Killebrew.

Brad Park, an all-star defenseman of the Boston Bruins and a former New York Ranger, will undergo surgery tomorrow for a torn cartilage in his left knee, at Massachusetts General Hospital. Jim Ward, a star on the United States Olympic team, has been signed by the California Seals. The 6-foot-3-inch, 193-pound goalie who played for Michigan Tech, was a fifth-round draft pick of the National Hockey League team in 1974. He will be assigned to the Seals' Salt Lake City farm.

The premier miler of the mid-1960's is hanging up his spikes. In Lawrenceville, Kan., yesterday, Jim Ryan stood with his college coach, Bob Timmons of the University of Kansas, and announced his retirement from professional track competition. Ryan, who has suffered several injuries as a pro, had not run since he re-injured his Achilles tendon during competition 11 days ago at

Salt Lake City. That injury influenced his decision to quit. "After that I prayed and prayed, and my prayers were answered," said Ryan. "God told me I had fought a good fight and run a good race, but I was through now." Ryan's last great year at Kansas was 1967, when he set world records in the mile and 1,500 meters in a 16-day span.

"I think all playgrounds should be unchained and I think anybody who tries to chain up any activity is demerited," said Mike Marshall. The Los Angeles Dodgers relief pitcher, a former Cy Young Award winner, had just used a hacksaw and a bolt-cutter yesterday to get into a Michigan State University athletic facility.

Investigating officers of the campus security force declined to arrest Marshall, who has already been arrested twice in the past week and charged with disrupting activities and trespassing. He has been battling with university officials over the use of a multi-sports arena in the intramural building.

The high school coach with the most football victories in the history of New Jersey, Clary Anderson, announced his retirement. He had been head football and baseball coach at Montclair State College the last seven years. The 64-year-old Anderson coached the Montclair High School football team to a 209-23-3 won-lost-tied record, a .901 winning percentage, while coaching his teams to 12 undefeated seasons and 14 state championships. Among the high school players Anderson coached was the astronaut Edwin (Buzz) Aldrin, the second man to walk on the moon.

The Massachusetts House paid homage to Luis Tiant, the Cuban-born pitching star of the Red Sox. He was given a three-foot-long gavel as a souvenir of the chamber. In the Senate, Tiant presented Senator President Kevin B. Harrington with two cigars. The Red Sox dealt reliever, Dick Drago, to the California Angels yesterday for John Balaz and Dave Sharon, outfielders, and Dick Machemer, a shortstop. Show Judge: A Father Passes Calling to His Son

By WALTER R. FLETCHER

Melbourne Downing has the distinction of being the only all-around judge whose father was also an all-rounder in the history of the American Kennel Club. "My father, who was president of Frank Downing, incorporated, a contracting company he founded in 1912, joined from the late nineteen-twenties until the nineteen-fifties," said Mel, as he is widely known in the dog show world.

Downing, a labor lawyer, not only followed his father as a judge—and he was a busy one, with 61 assignments last year—but he's also president of the contracting company.

"I learned a great deal about judging from my father and Alva Rosenberg," said Downing. "I frequently stewarded for them and they would discuss their choices with me and explain how they had decided on them." Dogs have played a role in the Towson, Md., resident's life from the start. "When I was born, my parents were breeding poodles," he said. "Then my father turned to German shepherds and my mother to Pekingese. I showed both breeds from the time I was 10 years old. "I think the highlight of my father's career with dogs

Colorado Takes Lead in N.C.A.A. Ski M

By MICHAEL STRAUSS

BETHEL, Me., March 3—The University of Colorado's ski team, defending national champion, moved into the lead as the National Collegiate Athletic Association's championships opened at the Sunday River ski area today.

Individual leadership, however, went to David Cleveland, a Dartmouth sophomore, who twice late during the 1.1-mile giant slalom course and took first place by 27 seconds. Michael Meleski of Wyoming was second.

Then came a trio of Colorado performers, who speedily descended the Buffaloes to gain a 7-point lead over Dartmouth. Colorado's high scorers were Bruce Gamble, Marc Milligan and Stephen Henzsch.

Mickey Cochran, wife for the four-year-old Barbara, Marilyn, Lindy and Bobby—set the first course. Cochran's layout put the emphasis on speed since this western Maine region is now mostly covered with hard, frozen surfaces. A three-inch snowfall this afternoon even slowed the runs in the second round, yet conditions the second time proved ideal for Cleveland.

In third place at the end of the first session, Cleveland registered the fastest time of the second round, scoring down the course in 1:30.85. Meleski was second at the end of the first round, which was led by Dave Dodge of Vermont, who then ran into

Baseball Talks Lurching Fast

BY MURRAY CHASS

Optimism that the negotiations earlier in the month would be completed before the end of the season left the 30 players further in their free-agent negotiations and indicated that of an already defined training was way than anyone else.

Philadelphia, president of the American League and of the owners' negotiating committee, had optimism only 24 hours ago, leading some to speculate that it might be the start of a strategy to result in the declaring enough had been made that the open camps.

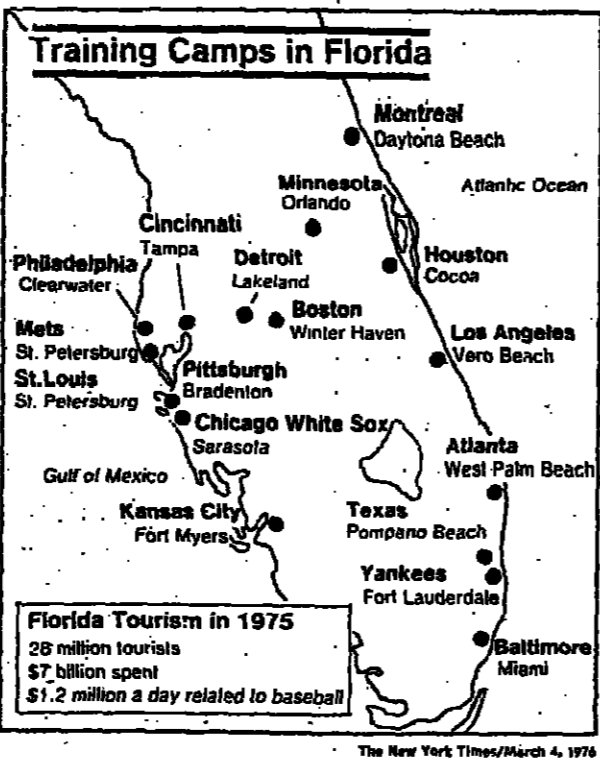

regaining session in each began on a positive note, yet with the two sides on some minor scheduling.

is tone of the meeting abruptly and the rest of the days growing more about the different existing contracts and new basic agree-

"At the end," Marvin Miller, the players' chief negotiator, said from Miami Beach, "I told them that our proposals are just ideas and if they don't like them, I wish they'd tell me now so we can wipe them off because I'm tired of it. My next step is to take them off the table."

"We haven't changed our position at all; we're on the table with eight and one," John Gaherin, the owners' chief negotiator, said from Fort Lauderdale. "But the overriding situation is a refusal of these people to accept the situation they have. They must make an agreement that solves the problem of current contracts. All their talk about lawsuits is a nice play or a nice tool if you don't want to face up to the situation."

The owners contend a new basic agreement would wipe out the clause in the existing contracts that has been interpreted in court to mean a player can become a free agent by playing one year without a signed contract. The Players Association maintains it can't bargain away a player's rights in

Baseball's Silent Spring Muffles Florida Tourist Season Boom

By JOSEPH DURSO

Special to The New York Times

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 3—The heaviest tourist season in history was crowding Florida's hotels, highways and beaches today, but the state's No. 1 industry—the fun in the sun—was losing more than a million dollars a day because baseball training camps were still closed.

Nobody was crying panic yet because the hotels were still 90 percent filled and the 28 million visitors expected this year were still believed likely to add $7 billion to Florida's economy. But the state was missing one of its surest signs of spring since the old St. Louis Browns started exercising here in 1912, and the most frequent question asked by people at the city's new information booth near the marina was: "Where are the ball clubs?"

The answer was that they were trying to settle the legal dispute between the players and teams over who "owns" whom. Instead of filling the 17 spring training sites in Florida and the seven in Arizona and California. The pitchers and catchers were reported "missing" about 10 days ago, the rest of the players three days ago, and their absence was reflected in telltale ways like these:

When the city of St. Petersburg mails its 85,000 water bills every March, it usually encloses the spring training baseball schedule along with the bills. This month, though, the customers got bills but no baseball schedules. "Too confusing the way things stand," a city official said.

When they play the annual old-timers' baseball game here for the March of Dimes, several thousand fans relive the good old days as they watch Bob Feller pitch to Stan Musial. Without ballplayers in town this year, though, the charity game needed some understudies. So the members of the City Council played a softball game against an "all-star team" of senior citizens. The Council won by the implausible score of 26 to 20.

When the City Council recently voted to spend $2.8 million to rebuild Al Lang Field, where major league teams have played since

Rigney Giants' Manager

SAN FRANCISCO, March 3 (AP)—"It's good to be back," said Bill Rigney, the former Giants' player and manager, moments after the new owners of the San Francisco team introduced him today as their new manager.

For the 57-year-old Rigney, it was a triumphant return to San Francisco and the club. He played for the Giants from 1946 to 1953 when they still occupied New York's Polo Grounds, then managed them for their last two years in New York and their first two on the West Coast.

Rigney was dismissed in the middle of the 1960 season after two third-place finishes in the National League, and Arthur (Bud) Herseth met for the first time after agreeing over the phone to split the $3 million purchase price yesterday.

The exuberance of Lurie, a San Francisco financier, contrasted with Herseth's admitted lack of ease in front of reporters and cameras. Herseth, 55, grew up on a ranch in Houghton, S.D., became a meat packer in Phoenix, Ariz., in 1949 and there acquired much of the wealth that enabled him to put down $4 million for the Giants.

Herseth said he would be "looking to Lurie for guidance" in running his 50 percent of the team, although he wanted to take part in the decision making.

However, Lurie reserved for himself the right to vote for the team at league owners' meetings. It was on this point that Lurie's original partnership with Bob Short collapsed. Lurie said other league owners wanted Lurie to have a controlling voice, but Short disputed this, saying it was Lurie himself who insisted on the final say.

Short, the former owner of American League franchises in Washington and Texas, sale even when the teams

Canucks Tie Rangers, 3-3, on Blight's Late Goal

Rick Blight (8) about to score his first goal of the game at the Garden last night in the first period. His second goal came with 25 seconds to play and tied the game at 3-3. Rangers' goalie is John Davidson.

Walton's Pass Sets Up the Deadlock

By PARTON KEES

The final 25 seconds last night upset what could have been a perfect execution of Part I of the Rangers' master plan to make the National Hockey League playoffs.

Rick Blight's goal, with their goalie pulled for an extra skater, gave the Vancouver Canucks a 3-3 tie and sent the Madison Square Garden fans home with a bad taste in their mouths.

Up to then, the Rangers had played an inspired game, knowing that with only 16 games left in the season, they needed to make up at least 10 points on the third-place Atlanta Flames.

Leading in the middle of the second period, 3-1, the Rangers had their followers ecstatic, especially with the scoreboard showing Atlanta losing to Detroit.

But besides Blight, the rookie right wing who tallied the first Canuck goal as well as his last, Vancouver also received a brilliant effort from Mike Walton, playing his first game in the N.H.L. since his former club, the Minnesota Fighting Saints, folded in the World Hockey Association.

Walton, starting at right wing but also playing center, scored a goal and added two assists, including one on Blight's second goal, to give a big lift to the deliberate Canuck's offense.

"You don't have to be a New York lawyer to know how Walton fits in with our team," said Coach Phil Maloney. "His first game with us, he doesn't know our players and he's suddenly the star."

Walton nearly became the goat. With New York ahead, 3-2, in the final period, Nick Beverly, a Ranger defenseman, was sent off the ice with a hooking penalty, giving Vancouver a power play at a crucial moment.

Before play could start again, however, Coach John the computer that compiles National Collegiate basketball statistics, it's as if Robert Parish didn't exist. "Where," somebody in the N.C.A.A. office was asked, "would Robert Parish of Centenary rank in this season if his statistics were recognized?"

"We," the N.C.A.A. man said, "don't have his statistics. We averaged," the N.C.A.A. man was told, "18 re-

"That," the N.C.A.A. man said, "would have led the nation."

"How about his career average of 16.9 rebounds a game?"

"That," the N.C.A.A. man said, "would put him up there close to Nate Thurmond, Dave Cowens and Elvin Hayes."

"What about his average of 24.8 points this season?"

"He'd be 10th in the nation," the N.C.A.A. man said. "That he's done won't ever be in the record books?"

"Can't. That was part of the N.C.A.A. ruling."

Shortly after Robert Parish agreed to attend the small college of 750 students in his home town of Port, La., four years ago, Centenary was placed on probation for six years and its team and players were debarred from N.C.A.A. statistics, as if they were ineligible for postseason play. Centenary also was declared ineligible for postseason play. Centenary's sin was the use of admissions office of a conversion scale to project on one standardized qualifying test in terms of basketball that the N.C.A.A. recognized.

"It was an academic violation," Coach Larry Little said in a recruiting violation. "By the time the N.C.A.A. put Centenary on probation, it had revoked the vague ruling on test conversions. But the punishment remained."

Top Four N.B.A. Prospects

When the N.C.A.A. and the National Invitation Tournament begin selecting teams today, the phone won't ring at Centenary, which has a 22-5 won-lost record as the 20th-ranked team in The Associated Press poll, because of its probation. Centenary doesn't exist in the United Press International poll of coaches, just as Robert Parish doesn't exist in the N.C.A.A. statistical compendium. His uniform number of "00" is symbolic of his absence.

But in the computers of the National Basketball Association scouts, Robert Parish exists as a 7-foot-11-inch, 200-pound center who might be the first player selected in the college draft, surely the second or third.

Robert Parrish has been selected as the "All-America" center in "The Sporting News" poll of N.B.A. general managers and scouts. Judging by the current standings, Chicago Bulls and the Atlanta Hawks, as the teams with the worst won-lost records in each conference, will flip

Undeclared Rutgers Starts Over Tonight

By GORDON S. WHITE JR.

Rutgers, with its 28-0 won-lost record, is highly favored to beat Long Island University (15-11) tonight in the first round of the Eastern College Athletic Conference Metropolitan region playoffs at Princeton University's Jadwin Gymnasium. St. John's (22-4) is the favorite over St. Peter's (18-9) in the other game at Princeton, starting at 7 P.M.

If form holds up before tonight's crowd of 7,500 at Jadwin Gym, already sold out, the E.C.A.C. should enjoy its biggest playoff ticket sale even when the teams move to Madison Square Garden for the regional final on Saturday afternoon. That final will be played at 3 P.M. Saturday and televised on Channel 4.

The E.C.A.C. regional winners will advance to the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament, which will begin March 13. The upstate New York E.C.A.C. playoffs begin tonight at Syracuse University's Manly Field House and the New England regional starts at Springfield (Mass.). Civic Center; those areas' finals are also set for Saturday afternoon. The Southern E.C.A.C. Playoffs will be held at West Virginia Coliseum tomorrow night and Saturday night.

Syracuse (18-8), favored in the upstate regional, meets Manhattan (14-12) tonight after St. Bonaventure (16-9) plays Niagara (16-10).

Providence (18-8) is the choice at Springfield, where the Friars play Holy Cross (20-8) and Connecticut (16-9) plays Massachusetts (21-4).

Tomorrow's Southern matchups are Georgetown (19-6) against Villanova (16-9) and George Washington (19-6) against West Virginia

HARTFORD, March 3—They call this city "the insurance capital of the world," with the main offices of Aetna, Travelers, Phoenix Mutual and the Hartford Group all within walking distance of the Civic Center. And if ever there were people who needed insurance—particularly health and travel policies—they are Dennis Ralston and Fred Stolle.

Ralston and Stolle are the respective captains of the United States and Australian tennis teams that begin play here tomorrow night in the four-of-seven-match World Cup. As a result of health and travel problems, their squads have been "sliced thinner than diet bread."

For the Australians, Rod Laver has scratched from the series because of the poor health of his wife, Mary. The other stars of the team—John Newcombe and Tony Roche—are en route from a Davis Cup series with New Zealand in Australia with stopovers in Fiji, Honolulu and Los Angeles. They aren't expected to arrive until an hour before the World Cup begins.

For the Americans, Dick Stockton was scratched after today's practice session because his sore back had not healed to Ralston's satisfaction. And Jimmy Connors, who is scheduled to play two singles matches, is still

S.E.C. Chief Refuses to Take a Position
On Public Disclosure at Bribe Hearings

WASHINGTON, March 3—Roderick M. Hills, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, resisted efforts at a Congressional hearing today to force him to take a position on public disclosure of the names of recipients of bribes paid by American companies overseas, including bribes paid by the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation.

Dow Average Falls 6.29
Despite Afternoon Gains

By STEVEN RAITNER
The stock market lilted in negative territory yesterday, but the decline came without any apparent vigor and even without any important news.

Some analysts believe that the market is burdened with continuing uncertainty over the Federal Reserve Board's policy. Early in the week it had appeared that the Fed was planning to tighten credit, but credit-market experts say policy is difficult to discern on a Wednesday, the last day of the banking week.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York intervened less in the foreign exchange markets in recent months than in any other period since 1973.

Essentially the Federal Reserve and other central banks buy and sell in the foreign currency markets to maintain a degree of stability in the value of their currencies in relation to those of other nations.

TOKYO, March 3 (AP)—A big Japanese trading company trying to repair an image hurt by the Lockheed payoff scandal shuffled its top executives today and said it would not do any new business with Lockheed.

Hiro Hiyama, board chairman of the Marubeni Corporation, said he was resigning "to take responsibility" for public criticism of Marubeni, but Marubeni officials said this did not mean the company was involved in alleged payoffs by Lockheed.

Directors Resign

Two weeks ago, two managing directors of Marubeni resigned after testifying in parliamentary hearings that they had signed receipts for Lockheed for "peanuts," "pieces" and "units" without knowing what these represented and without receiving any payments.

They and Mr. Hiyama all denied allegations that they had suggested or handled Lockheed payments to Japanese Government officials in efforts to increase Lockheed sales here.

Conglomerates Staging a Comeback

By VARTAN G. VARTAN

During the dynamic stock-market rally of the last three months, one of Wall Street's long-forgotten favorite groups has shared handsomely in the rebound.

Advancing to new 1975-76 highs this week, for example, were Teledyne and Litton Industries. Both are classified as conglomerates—a group that caught the fancy of money managers in the "Swinging Sixties," only to plunge disastrously after disenchantment set in.

The original concept of the conglomerate was to diversify product lines by acquiring companies in a varied line of industries and thus to spread the business risk over different economic cycles.

The rise and fall in prices for many of these companies, when viewed on the stock charts, tended to resemble the profile of a mountain with a steep upslope, a peak and a precipitous downslope.

A-T-O Inc., once known as "Automatic" Specialty, saw its stock sell below 13 in 1967, climb to a high of 74 in 1968 and then fall as low as 6 two years later.

Litton once was regarded as the showcase conglomerate and an innovator in its field. Fifteen years ago its shares traded below 20. The price peaked just above 100 in 1967, then plummeted below 3 in 1974.

With variations, this pattern of rise and fall was repeated among such other companies as Whittaker, Gulf and Western, Bangor Punta, Textron, Walter Kidde and International Telephone and Telegraph.

Factors that sent the conglomerates reeling ranged, among individual companies, from earnings declines and accounting abuses to trust-busting activity by the Government and, finally, the vicious bear market that ravaged stocks generally between 1969 and 1974.

The recent dramatic percentage gains for some of these stocks stem in part from the low levels to which prices were driven—especially after mutual funds and other money managers unloaded the issues—and to an improved earnings outlook. They also reflect the more venturesome attitude of many traders and investors in the wake of the general market's strong surge of the last three months.

Litton has benefitted from a modest increase in reported earnings and from a large Navy contract for building destroyers.

Teledyne, meanwhile, has been a spectacular performer lately. In the first two days of this week, it climbed a total of 9 points.

That advance is impressive when one recalls that a single share of Teledyne, which makes a wide range of industrial and consumer products, sold for only 9 1/4 early last year.

What sent Teledyne's stock flying recently was a company offer to repurchase one million shares of its own stock at $40 a share. This was followed by a company announcement that it would accept all of the estimated 2.5 million shares tendered in response to the offer.

On Tuesday, Teledyne traded above 40 while Litton's shares sold above 16. Yesterday, Litton was the best gainer on the active lists, climbing one point to 16.

Three months ago, an investment advisory service called Indicator Digest issued a recommendation under the heading, "Some conglomerates are out of the doghouse."

Teledyne, then selling at 20 1/2, was among the choices. Other recommendations were Gulf and Western Industries, Walter Kidde, Loews Corporation, Northwest Industries and Textron.

All of these stocks have appreciated in price since that original recommendation. At the same time, Wall Street analysts warn that each conglomerate must be scrutinized in terms of its individual strong or weak points.

Thomas M. Roginski, a portfolio strategist at Merrill Lynch, stresses three basic guidelines:

"Look at the group company by company."
"Focus especially on the quality of earnings. For example, one should pay close attention to the corporate footnotes such as pension liabilities and the handling of foreign currency reserves."
"Try to isolate companies with a heavy consumer orientation, since the consumer is expected to lead the current economic recovery."

Currently, Textron is a stock on Merrill Lynch's recommended list. This is not the first time that prices of conglomerates have snapped back dramatically after their fall from favor in 1968-69.

Between the bear-market bottom in the summer of 1970 and the early spring of 1971, prices tripled in such stocks as Gulf and Western, Puqua Industries, White Consolidated Industries and General Host.

As domestic sales have started to increase, import car sales have declined. The slump continued in February but the outlook appeared brighter, analysts said.

Foreign car sales were estimated at 107,000, off 26 percent from 146,200 in February 1975. January import sales were off 21 percent but the foreign cars market share was only 13 percent.

Their market share moved up to 14 percent in February. However, last month's market share was off by one-third from the 21.5 percent penetration imports enjoyed a year ago.

Imports sales for the first two months of the year of 196,600 were off 24 percent from 260,400 in 1975 and their market share of 13.7 percent was down from 20.7 percent a year ago.

RESERVE ACTION ABROAD DECLINES

The swap network is a $20.2 billion series of immediately available, short-term reciprocal credit lines linking the Federal Reserve with 14 foreign central banks and the Bank for International Settlements.

Mr. Holmes noted that the outlook for the dollar is "quite good," provided that inflation is kept under control. He also predicted that the United States would show a trade surplus this year, although not so large as last year's record $11 billion surplus.

Mr. Holmes and Mr. Pardee explained that official intervention in the foreign exchange markets by the world's centrality in Rambouillet, France, in banks is now very closely coordinated. At the close of the Interday's trading in Europe, for example, a trading desk officer maica in January 1976.

Personal Finance: Dividend Investment Plans Consolidated Trading for N.Y.S.E. Iss

By LEONARD SLOANE The recent renewed interest in the stock market has also renewed interest in dividend investment plans—developed almost a decade ago to intensify ties of stockholders with corporations.

plans—all designed to make dividend reinvestment more attractive to the average shareholder. "Dividend reinvestment is sort of the practical equivalent of preemptive rights [offering "present" stockholders the first opportunity to buy new stock], said William Kuhns, chairman of the General Public Utilities Corporation, which started a plan last year. "It's a way of converting dividends to stock without going through the mails.

At present, many companies offer a dividend reinvestment plan to their shareholders, according to a survey earlier this year by Lehman Brothers & Co., a stockholder research firm. It estimates that the total rise to almost 800 by the end of 1976 and approach 1,000 a year later.

choose to participate, the amount that would otherwise be sent to them is invested in the company stock at the prevailing market price and a statement listing all of the details is mailed. Although stock certificates are not issued unless specifically requested, shareholders retain the voting rights for everything in their accounts.

These are usually two types of charges to participants: a service fee to the bank acting as plan custodian and a brokerage fee for buying the stock. Service fees to banks—Citibank has the largest share of this market—are between 1 and 2 percent of the amount invested, with a maximum typically of $2 to $3 per transaction. Commissions to brokers average about 1 percent of the cost of the purchase.

Home Office Now in Control — 3 Key Officers Retire

The Lockheed Aircraft Corporation announced yesterday from Burbank, Calif., that all of its international marketing activities, including the operation of the company's overseas offices, would be directed from the home office, effective immediately.

The Lockheed International Company, a division that formerly ran these activities, has been discontinued. Its president, George Pratt, 52 years old, has been reassigned to the post of director of market development.

His predecessor in that job, Jack Clutter, retired last Sunday at the age of 64. From 1972 to 1974, Mr. Clutter worked for Lockheed International in Tokyo. It was during that period that the aerospace company distributed millions of dollars to Japanese agents to promote sales of its aircraft.

A spokesman for Lockheed declined to comment on whether the reorganization or the retirement of Mr. Clutter and two senior officers whose retirements were also announced yesterday were related to the disclosures of massive payoffs in foreign countries.

Mr. Proxmire asked Mr. Hills several times for assurances that he favored full disclosure of American foreign payoffs by Lockheed, including the names of those bribed. Each time Mr. Hills refused to say he would favor such disclosure.

When asked more general questions, Mr. Hills indicated that he had no broad answer. "I'm not capable at this time of answering the question on a categorical basis" was his reply at one point.

"All this is a sad reflection on the standards of conduct that we have come to expect from the international business community. We are constantly being lectured to about our various shortcomings, and yet it seems that those who preach to us themselves suffer from a laxity of moral tone." He did not elaborate.

Since Mr. Hoveyda's speech was the last address of the conference, there was no formal reply to his remarks from the American financiers present.

Earlier Mr. Rockefeller had told a group of reporters here, when questioned about the widespread reports of payoffs by United States companies around the world, "It is clearly the exception, not the rule."

Mr. Rockefeller was chairman of today's session of the conference, at which 50 American financiers and bankers and 50 Iranian financial leaders discussed the ways in which financial institutions could be built up in Iran.

PRICES OF BONDS IN MIXED PATTERN

Treasury Notes Dip Slightly - Corporates Rise a Bit

By JOHN H. ALLAN. After the sharp moves in bond prices and yields late last week and early this week, the credit markets simmered down yesterday. Most bond prices moved upward early in the day and sales of above the newly offered bond issues perked up, but the advance gave way in the afternoon. At the close, fixed-income security prices showed no overall trend. Treasury notes were down slightly, Treasury bonds were up slightly and corporate bonds and notes posted a mixture of gains and losses.

Corporate Market

In the corporate bond market's sell-off in recent days, the yield on the New Jersey Bell debentures has risen from its original 8.34 percent to 8.49 percent. "There was 15 to 20 basis points of fluff in the market," one corporate bond dealer remarked as he asserted that he thought interest rates had been pushed down that much too far by an overly exuberant marketplace. Now that interest rates are likely to trade in a narrow range close to their current levels, he predicted.

G.M.A.C. Files Notes

In another corporate fixed-income financing development, the General Motors Acceptance Corporation filed $400 million of medium-term notes with the Securities and Exchange Commission to be marketed directly by the big finance company. Rates on the notes will start at 6 percent on those with maturities between nine months and one year and will range up to 8 percent on those due from four to five years.

Advertising

Putting Emphasis on Square

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY

Back in 1969 after a year as president of Compton Advertising, Milton Gossett admitted that the image of the agency was summed up by the words square, dull and gray.

Milton Gossett

"We've done a lot to reinforce that image," he says. Then he mentioned his German father-in-law, a superb home craftsman who does not know much about the agency business.

"Then speaking for himself, he said, 'This agency stands for things I wouldn't change for the world—hard work, discipline, craftsmanship. Those things have been paying off for us.'"

Milt Gossett, tall, loose-limbed and craggy-faced like a bearless Lincoln, is proud that his full-service agency—the country's 25th largest—is adding even more services.

He talked about the year-old direct-marketing unit run by Phyllis Slagg, and the TV retail department that creates broadcast advertising for clients whose products are sold through retailers.

He also brought up the new products group whose activities have brought in new business, and the collateral division that whips up brochures, catalogues and similar things.

"We're trying to be more full-service," he said, adding "My biggest job is, people. What I want to make sure of is that they have fun and I want to give them so much to do that they'll have sweaty palms—working to full potential."

Compton, which in the lush and flush old days employed 10 persons per million dollars in billings, is now down to 4.5 (or nine sweaty palms) per million.

Its domestic billings last year were about $110 million. On a worldwide basis (it has 35 offices in 21 countries), Advertising Age put its billings at $200 million. The trade publication ranks Compton's 18th worldwide among American agencies.

Although the agency did not do so well in profits last year as it did in 1974, a record year, Milt Gossett thinks 1976 should set records.

If nothing else, it should see him making a record number of public appearances spreading the gospel of square.

Champagne for Wells

The most exciting thing that happened at the Wells.

Rich, Greene annual meeting yesterday afternoon was the serving of champagne (Gallo, a client).

The reason for the unexpected largesse is that the agency is celebrating its 10th anniversary next month and as Mary Wells Lawrence, the chairman, was wont to point out the agency is the fastest-growing in the history of the business and is the "only truly young agency in the top 25."

Most of the time was spent with Mrs. Lawrence's account of the history of the agency from its humble beginnings at the Gotham Hotel to its present glory on three floors of the General Motors Building. She introduced all of her executives down through the senior vice president level. She had nice things to say about all of them.

As far as last year went, she noted that the salary raises of 1974 caught up with the profit line, as did increases in all other areas. Billings should be up this year and 1976 generally should be "stronger," she said, going on to observe that if all of the new products on which the agency is currently working develop as hoped, the growth of Wells, Rich, Greene is assured.

Fabulous Babe

Next month advertising will break for Babe, the new fragrance line developed by Fabergé around its $1 million spokesmodel, Margaux Hemingway.

The company says it will be spending more on this introduction promotion than on any previous entry with 3 million scheduled for media alone.

The line will include spray cologne, perfume and bath powder and is aimed at the 18-to-34 market.

Nadler & Larimer has prepared both television and print advertising with the model-granddaughter of Ernest Hemingway. The copy in the commercial goes like this:

"You're like no other one born. You're fabulous, Babe. You know how to reach out and show your love. You're fabulous, Babe. You're one of the boys, but you're a real girl. You're fabulous, Babe. You're a beautiful thing to be close to. Now there's a fragrance so natural, so fresh and new, we named it just for you. Babe—by Fabergé."

Both network and spot TV will be used. The print ads for "The Fabulous Babe" will run in Cosmopolitan, Glamour, Mademoiselle, Seventeen, New York, The New York Times Magazine, Vogue, People, Viva and Teen.

You're spending $3 million. You're fabulous, Babe.

Peppermint for Freedent

Good news, all of you peppermint-loving denture wearers. Wrigley, which last year introduced Freedent, the spearmint-flavored chewing gum that it says won't stick to false teeth, is now adding Freedent Peppermint. Television advertising will continue to advertise only the name Freedent and give the product's attributes. Flavor will be left out. However, it is expected that there will be some announcement advertising in newspapers. Arthur Meyerhoff Associates is the agency.

Creative Post

Altman, Stoller, Weiss, which has added some new business since the first of the year, has also just added Bernie Zlotnick as a senior vice president to be co-creative director with Martin Shaw. Young Mr. Zlotnick had been at Young & Rubicam and was a co-founder of Barnett Zlotnick, which became part of Y & R.

was Eight National Industries, which rose 3% to 29%, a gain of 22.6 percent. After the market close on Tuesday, the company simultaneously announced higher earnings, a resumed dividend and a tender offer for 300,000 of its own shares.

The biggest loser was Citizens and Southern Realty Investors, which dropped 2 1/2 to 2%, a decline of 46.2 percent. The company reported on Tuesday that 74.3 percent of its real estate investments were non-earning as of last Dec. 31.

The volume leader yesterday was Florida Power and Light, up 1/2 to 24 1/2. Two large blocks, one of 384,200 shares and one of 189,400, were the reason, rather than any new development.

Auto issues were heavily represented on the most active list, because of an increase in February sales of about 20 percent. Chrysler rose 1/2 to 19%, American Motors was up

1/2 to 7 1/2, and General Motors gained 1/2 to 67%.

Good news on earnings; dividends and other corporate developments bolstered number of sales, including Times Mirror, Munsingwear, TRW, U. S. Shoe, Coca-Cola and Morse Shoe.

But adverse developments depressed even more issues, including UAL Inc., Halliburton, Fairchild Camera and National Semiconductor. The business-machines group, with the notable exception of I.B.M., was also down sharply.

One lingering effect of the African situation was a decline in ASA Ltd., which has heavy interests in South African Gold mining, of 1 and 27 1/2. At the same time, United States gold mining stocks rose sharply.

Analysts believe that part of the current consolidation phase involves a shift in interest away from the highest-grade issues and into lower-priced, more speculative stocks. One indication of this has been the continuing superior performance of the composite index relative to the Dow Jones industrials. Yesterday, the Dow was down by 0.639 percent, while the composite dropped only 0.576 percent.

"There's a decline in the quality of market leadership," said John C. Sutherland, a senior vice president in charge of trust investment at Irving Trust.

Mr. Sutherland believes that individuals are responsible for the new interest in the second-tier stocks and that institutional buying has been on the wane.

The volume of trading in all issues listed on the Big Board, including transactions on regional exchanges and in market, dropped slightly to 29.64 million shares, from 29.76 the over-the-counter or "third-million shares on Tuesday.

than one-tenth of 1 per cent. The figure was an improvement, however; there was a 5 per cent drop for this sector in December.

The Commerce Department said the individual industries contributing most to the overall increase in new orders were electrical machinery (up 16.7 percent) and fabricated metal products (up 8.4 percent).

The Government said the value of shipments by factories in January was up 1.9 percent, compared with a 1.3 percent advance in December.

The department also reported that inventories held by manufacturers remained virtually unchanged for the fourth consecutive month at $148.8 billion.

All it takes to win this new car is a sharp pencil, and some sharp answers.

If you work for an ad agency, or in the marketing or advertising department of an advertiser, just fill in the blanks in the comparison chart, and send your answers to:

Psychology Today "Car Contest," at the address on the coupon.

If your answers are correct and received by 4/20/76, you get a chance to win a Chevrolet Monte Carlo with air conditioning, AM/FM radio and vinyl roof. The winner will be determined by a random drawing from all correct answers.

We'll give you a clue: more PT readers buy new cars than the readers of just about every other major magazine.

But no matter what the product category, whether it's automobile purchases, liquor, or travel, PT readers are at or near the top of the list.

That's because PT readers know what they want in life and go after it. They live their dreams today, not tomorrow.

The more you know about PT readers, the more you'll know you should be a PT advertiser.

PT readers live their dreams today, not tomorrow.
Psychology Today

A Ziff-Davis Publication

Contest valid within the contiguous continental United States at dealer's discretion. Winner's legal residence. Freight charges, sales taxes and license fees not included. All entries must be received by April 20, 1976. No substitution for prizes collected. Winner selected in random drawing from all correct entries received by Ventura Associates, an independent judging organization. If no correct entries are received a winner will be selected from all entries. Final authority on contest awards is the W. R. Simmons 1974-1975 Magazine Audience Report. Employees of Ziff-Davis Publishing Company and its advertising and judging agencies are not eligible. Offer void where prohibited or restricted by law. All Federal, state and local laws apply. Multiple entries void for violation. Decision of the judges is final. Payment of Federal, state and local taxes imposed on the prize is the sole responsibility of the prize winner. For the name of the winner, send a separate stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ventura Associates, 40 East 49th St., New York, New York 10017.
